

Default Postponed

NEW YORK (AP) — Gov. Hugh L. Carey said Tuesday that enough money has been found to keep New York City from default on Nov. 14 but added: "Dec. 1 is the date beyond which we cannot stretch at this time."

Carey said following a meeting of the Emergency Financial Control Board set up by the state to supervise city spending, "We received notice today that all commitments needed will be delivered by Monday." He did not say where the money was coming from.

There had been a shortfall of about $150 million, without which the $750 million otherwise pledged to get the city through November would be unavailable.

Meanwhile, in Washington, Senate Democratic leaders indicated they were scrambling to persuade colleagues to support a measure offering $4 billion in loan guarantees to the city.

Carey repeated his warning to President Ford and some congressional committees that it would cost the federal government $1 billion between Dec. 1 and next June 30 if the city went into bankruptcy.

"There are very few in Congress who want to shell out the money needed to bail out the city" under Ford's proposal that the federal government provide aid only in the event of default.

"On the other hand, we thoroughly endorse and support the Congressional plan for guarantees under which the city would finance itself without it costing the federal government a cent," he said.

Carey said the board has drawn up a list of things the city and state have done to help themselves out of the financial mess since last May — including imposition of more than $300 million in new taxes, tens of thousands of firings, cuts in services and the increase in transit fares from 35 to 50 cents.

"The people around the country don't realize these things because of the President's speech and other misleading information," Carey said.

Felix Rohatyn, chairman of the Municipal Assistance Corp., said he was working on a new "complex financial plan which will enable us to fund the city for the next three years ourselves."

Rohatyn, a banker, did not provide details but said the plan involved restructuring the city's $2.6 billion short-term debt. He said it also would require a commitment from the city's $8 billion pension funds to use about $2 billion of their assets as collateral for re-financing.

Rohatyn called it a "very iffy" plan, stressing the legal and practical difficulties of putting it into effect before Dec. 1.

Senate Banking Committee Chairman William Proxmire, D-Wis., whose committee produced the bill, said he and the measure's sponsor, Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III, D-Ill., had to go to the other senators "to make it understood this is a very, very tough bill. Without this we might need the assistance of the federal government (in New York) for eight or 10 years or longer."

They had hoped to bring the bill to the Senate floor by week's end, but a delay was announced amid predictions by Republican leaders that the measure could not be enacted before the city defaults.

Senate Majority leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said after a meeting of the Senate Democratic Policy Committee that the committee would meet again in a few days to discuss the bill's prospects.

House Republican leader John J. Rhodes of Arizona and Sen. Robert P. Griffin, R-Mich., said after a meeting with Ford that only the President's proposed changes in bankruptcy laws to accommodate a New York City default had any chance of becoming law in time to help.

But House Speaker Carl Albert, D-Okla., and House Banking Committee Chairman Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., said they thought they had a chance to win passage of aid legislation and to convince Ford to sign it despite his promise of a veto.

"In my judgment, our fight is uphill all the way, but I believe we have a good fighting chance. We may be able to pull it off," said Reuss.

Albert said at a news conference that the House would begin debate Tuesday on a bill approved Monday by the House Banking Committee to offer up to $7 billion in federal guarantees to New York City.

Record '76 Corn Crop Needed To Fill Demand

WASHINGTON (AP) — A grain policy decision announced Tuesday by the Agriculture Department indicates that farmers will need to produce another record corn crop in 1976 in order to provide enough grain for consumers, livestock and thriving overseas markets.

The tipoff was in a routine announcement by USDA that farmers will have a 1976 "national allotment" of 89 million acres for the production of livestock feed grains. That is the same level as in 1974 and 1975 when soaring exports took much of the nation's reserve and the government urged farmers to plant all out so that stocks could be rebuilt.

Under a complicated formula required by law, the 89 million acres represents the amount of land experts say it will take to produce "the quantity of corn, sorghum and barley USDA estimates the U.S. will use domestically and for export" during 1976-7.

Although no further figures were announced, officials told a newsman that the 89 million acres allowed for a projection of 5.9 billion bushels of corn in 1976, up from this year's record of 5.7 billion. It also calls for 860 million bushels of sorghum against 776 million in 1975, and 430 million of barley, compared with 382 million from this harvest.

Officials cautioned that the figures used in the formula are not predictions for 1976 harvests. But they are, a spokesman said, "reasonable projections" of what might be expected next year if farmers get normal weather and follow through with what appears to be another all-out planting effort.

The 89 million acres is not a government restriction on how much land farmers can plant to those crops. Crops were removed for 1974 and 1975 crops, and those have been suspended again for next year.

For example, farmers planted about 106 million acres of corn, sorghum and barley for 1975, although the allotment was 89 million acres.

"The department believes producers in 1976 will again study prices and demand, particularly the favorable export outlook, in planning their farming operations," the announcement said.

Under the law, the allotment is used to compute government "target price" payments to farmers if market prices for commodities fall below a certain level. The target for 1975 corn, for example, is $1.38 a bushel, while the market price at the farm was $2.62 as of mid-October.

Some farm groups and members of Congress have sought higher target prices as a further guarantee against markets tumbling and to help offset rising production costs. An escalator based on production costs will take effect next year, with a possible corn target of $1.57 per bushel being talked about. However, officials said no announcement will be made until after the first of the year.

According to the figures used in determining next year's acreage allotment, domestic use of corn — largely for livestock — is expected to be 4.5 billion bushels in the 1976-77 marketing year, up from no more than 4.1 billion expected this season. Exports were put at 1.4 billion bushels, down slightly from current estimates for 1975-76.

Denney Puts Buzzer In Council Chambers

City Council Chairman Max Denney may have headed off fellow lawmakers' alarm over the sergeant-at-arms controversy. On Tuesday, workmen were busily installing a buzzer under Denney's desk in the council chambers.

Denney said, however, he ordered the buzzer installed "about a month ago" to be used in case there are emergencies. If the buzzer is pushed, an alarm will go off in the Police Department.

Denney said he told Councilman Bob Sikyta that he was ordering the buzzer.

However, it'll probably come as somewhat of a surprise to the rest of the council, which has been embroiled in a mini controversy over security in the City Council Chambers.

Sikyta and Steve Cook have suggested a uniformed police officer be stationed in the chambers during council meetings. An alternate, they have proposed, is the installation of a buzzer.

Denney indicated he didn't want the installation of the alarm publicized, since he asserted, "This would be used purely for emergencies. I'm not worried about an attack or anything."

Denney couldn't remember exactly how much it will cost to put in the alarm.

"It isn't very much," he said.

Mayor Strikes Down Standing Power Deal

Mayor Helen Boosalis Tuesday struck down the City Council's standing offer to sink $129 million into the Ft. Calhoun No. 2 nuclear power station.

That offer already has been rejected by the Omaha Public Power District and the Nebraska Public Power District.

The mayor was forced to either endorse the proposal or veto it, because the council refused Monday to withdraw the offer despite repeated assurances by OPPD and NPPD that they wouldn't buy the deal.

The council's action "does not make good business sense," Mrs. Boosalis asserted. The city would have no guarantee as to the amount of power the city would receive in return for the money.

The mayor's action was not unexpected, since she has voiced reservations about the council's action during the past week.

"I feel that such an offer cannot remain on the public record, and that the taxpayers and bondholders of the city deserve to have the public record set straight," the mayor said.

The open-ended offer which set a monetary ceiling, but required no minimum amount of electricity to be acquired with that money, places the city in an unfavorable economic position, she charged.

It is unlikely that the council will override her veto, since only four councilmen favored the offer in the first place. It takes five votes to override a mayoral veto.

Iowa Man Dies In Omaha Crash

Omaha (AP) — A 19-year-old Carter Lake, Iowa, man died Tuesday as a result of injuries received in the collision of a car and a semi truck.

His name was withheld pending notification of relatives.

Authorities said the victim's car was traveling at a high rate of speed in an industrial area when it struck the rear wheels of the truck.

The accident was not related to a heavy fog which covered portions of Omaha Tuesday, police said.

Solons Rebuff Exon Plan, Accept Revised Proposal

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

The Unicameral Tuesday rebuffed Gov. J. James Exon's stopgap plan to prevent 1976 tax increases, but accepted a revised proposal to meet the state's immediate cash flow problems.

When lawmakers adjourned for the day, they were in the midst of considering a number of proposals which would reduce the governor's $10.4 million in recommended budget cuts by $4 million.

Only the cash flow issue appeared to be resolved, with tax and budget decisions subject to reconsideration.

Major Judgments
Tuesday's major legislative judgments:

— reducing the 3% state tax collection cushion for 1976 to 3%, but requiring the State Board of Equalization to consider future commitments (called "express obligations") in establishing tax rates.

— accepting Sen. Robert Clark's proposal to stretch out state aid and reimbursement payments to local governments in monthly allotments, thereby easing the state treasury past its critical cash flow months which begin in January.

— rejecting proposals to require the Legislature to set tax rates, and to increase the personal income tax rate from 12% to 13%, beginning Jan. 1, 1976.

Wanted Cushion Ignored
Exon had requested in LB4 that the Board of Equalization be allowed to ignore any tax collection cushion requirement and future state obligations in establishing 1976 state sales and income tax rates.

Only in that way, he warned, could taxpayers avoid an increase in tax rates.

Arguing that some cushion is needed and that future commitments must be considered, Sen. Jules Burbach of Hartington gained 26-16 consent for his proposed revisions.

The bill then received 29-12 first stage approval.

Will Reduce Pressure
While the reduction in the tax collection cushion from 5% to 3% will reduce the pressure on 1976 tax rates, the revised LB4 will not prevent a likely hike in the current 2½% state sales tax levy and the 12% personal income tax rate.

State Tax Commissioner William Peters declined to forecast a specific rate since future action on the budget cutting bill could affect the final figures.

But he indicated that a 3% state sales tax rate and a 15% personal income tax rate could be possible.

The Board of Equalization must set the rates by Nov. 15.

Accepted Without Dissent
Clark's proposal to meet cash flow problems, written into LB3, was accepted without dissent and the measure was sent on its way toward almost certain enactment on a 42-0 count.

Without some management of state expenditures, the treasury will fall $11 million short of meeting its January commitments.

Clark's plan reduces large annual, semi-annual and quarterly state aid and reimbursement payments to smaller monthly sums, allowing the state to avoid any deficiencies.

Changes Proposed
The third major Exon proposal, LB6, was subject to a number of proposed changes when senators quit for the day.

A number of amendments would exclude from proposed 3% budget cuts such agencies as the University of Nebraska, the state colleges, the community colleges, the State Patrol and community mental retardation programs funded through the Department of Public Institutions.

Acceptance of all exclusions would reduce the $10.4 million in proposed budget cuts to about $6.4 million. The largest exception would be the university, scheduled for a $2.3 million budget reduction under Exon's plan.

Sen. Loran Schmit of Bellwood initiated the drive for selective, rather than across-the-board, budget cuts, arguing that reductions should be limited to those agencies which say they could endure them.

Under Governor
Most of the remaining state agencies are directly under the governor's control.

Sen. James Dickinson of Millard warned that the Schmit proposal could lead to "a pork barrel process (in which) we cut the tail off an inch at a time."

Sen. Frank Lewis of Bellevue attempted to transfer tax rate-setting authority from the Board of Equalization to the Legislature, but was turned down on an 18-27 vote.

"It's our responsibility," he argued. His proposal to boost the income tax rate to 13% fell on a 6-32 score.

Once again, senators seemed resigned to the likelihood of being blamed for future tax rises.

"We're going to get clobbered," Sen. George Syas of Omaha declared. "Can't Get Off"

Arguing for a 1% tax collection cushion instead of the 3% figure, Sen. John Cavanaugh III of Omaha warned that "we're on the hook and can't get off."

At least the 1% cushion would tend to hold down 1976 rates, he noted. But the proposal was buried on a 16-24 vote.

Here is the vote to accept Burbach's 3% plan:

For: Anderson, Barnett, Bereuter, Burbach, Burrows, Carsten, Cope, Duis, Dworak, Hessebrook, Johnson, Kelly, Kime, Kremer, R. Lewis, Luedtke, Marsh, Marvel, Moylan, Murphy, Rasmussen, Schmit, Swigart, Syas, Warner, Wiltsie.

Against: Cavanaugh, Clark, DeCamp, Dickinson, Fitzgerald, George, Keyes, F. Lewis, Mahoney, Marsh, Mills, Nichol, Rumery, Savage, Stoner, Stull.

Absent or Not Voting: Chambers, Fowler, Goodrich, Kennedy, Koch, Simpson, Skarda.

Voters Reject Mid-State Project

Lincoln Star Special
The Mid-State Reclamation District, a hotly contested issue in central Nebraska, went down to defeat Tuesday in a special election involving voters in Buffalo, Hall and Merrick counties.

Unofficial returns showed a total of 8,788 votes against the project, compared to 6,860 in favor.

Only in Hall County did the issue carry with a vote of 4,132 to 3,873.

where the turnout at the polls was described as fair.

In Merrick County, the issue was defeated almost two to one, according to County Clerk Floyd Gorgen. The tally there was 715 for the issue, 1,325 against.

Buffalo County voters opposed the project by a vote of 3,589 to 2,013. Congress will have the final decision on the project which has been in the works since the district was formed 27 years ago.

Tuesday's election climaxed a bitter lengthy campaign which has involved residents of central area as well as other Nebraskans.

Heading the Mid-State campaign was Don Shinner, the district's $25,000-a-year general manager. Leading the opponents were unpaid volunteers headed by the Save Our Land Committee.

Gulf Oil Accused Of Cover-Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gulf Oil Corp. was accused Tuesday of hiding a financial arrangement by which its former chief lobbyist allegedly used Gulf funds to repay the company in settlement of a stockholder suit last year.

The settlement with a dissident stockholder group, the Project on Corporate Responsibility, called for the lobbyist, Claude Wild Jr., to pay $25,000 to Gulf to reimburse the corporation for legal and other expenses it incurred because of Wild's illegal political donations.

The project said on Tuesday, however, that the money Wild used to repay Gulf came not from his own pocket, but from Gulf itself.

The group filed court papers seeking to reopen the case to take testimony from Wild and Gulf officials. They alleged this series of transactions:

—Wild allegedly loaned himself $25,000 from a company-sponsored political fund, the "Committee for Good Government," of which he was chairman. The political fund's money had been raised in donations from Gulf executives, and was separate from Gulf's corporate money.

—Wild allegedly used the $25,000 loan to repay Gulf in settlement of the stockholder suit last year.

—Wild, who had been fired in March 1974 after pleading guilty to making illegal donations, was then rehired as a consultant at $75 an hour. Gulf paid him $30,000 in corporate funds, to do "emergency" lobbying.

—Wild then repaid the $25,000 he had borrowed from the political fund on Nov. 25, 1974.

Tuesday's complaint by the stockholder group charged that the net result of these transactions was that Wild secretly used Gulf's own money to repay the company.

"This whole affair smells of a cover-up," said project office Susan Goss.

Is Kissinger A Loser Or An Instigator?

By HELEN THOMAS
United Press International
Washington — Administration officials said Tuesday Henry A. Kissinger lost great power in President Ford's Cabinet shakeup and suggested Elliot Richardson might succeed him as secretary of state within a year.

But intelligence officials asserted that, on the contrary, Kissinger instigated the so-called "Sunday night massacre" in which Ford fired Defense Secretary James Schlesinger and CIA Director William Colby. They said Kissinger came out a winner even though he lost his "other job" as the President's chief national security adviser.

The administration officials said Kissinger's loss of the national security advisory post would severely reduce his access to Ford and provide "more balance" in foreign policy decisions.

An Hour A Week
They said Kissinger, who has met with Ford for one hour every morning until now, will normally see the President for only one hour each week.

They said Donald Rumsfeld, the White House chief of staff who will become defense secretary, will get the same access. In addition, they said, Kissinger, Rumsfeld and George Bush, the U.S.

representative to Peking who will succeed Colby as CIA director, will meet jointly with Ford twice a week or so.

Kissinger also loses the White House office he had as national security adviser, a job being assumed by his deputy, Lt. Gen. Brent Scowcroft. The administration officials denied Scowcroft is merely Kissinger's loyal alter ego and said he holds many different policy views.

Richardson Speculation
The officials also speculated that Richardson, now ambassador to Britain, may have accepted Ford's offer to succeed Rogers Morton as commerce secretary with the expectation he might eventually replace Kissinger as secretary of state — perhaps even before the 1976 elections.

Richardson, who has held three other Cabinet posts, told a London news conference Tuesday he might accept nomination either as vice president or secretary of state.

"I suppose, if I were asked, I would accept," he said. "But there is no use speculating on that. I don't want to muddy the waters by identifying myself as a possibility."

Sources within the U.S. intelligence community, however, insisted Kissinger was no victim in the power shuffle.

"I would definitely regard Henry as the key man in all this and I certainly don't see his position has been weakened," one senior intelligence official told UPI's Norman D. Sandler.

Other Sources Agree
Other intelligence sources agreed in a series of telephone interviews with Sandler.

"It looks to me as if the upshot of all this is that Ford is trying to get a hold on his own administration and Dr. Kissinger has lost a point in it" by giving up the security post, a former high-ranking CIA official said.

"But he has made on great tactical gain in getting rid of Schlesinger."

These sources said Kissinger's main objective was to eliminate Schlesinger as a powerful rival — a man with intellectual credentials equal to Kissinger's and who clashed with him on the value of detente and the amount of military might needed to offset Soviet power.

Rumsfeld's Stature Doubtful
"I would be very surprised if Rumsfeld turned out to have the intellectual stature of Schlesinger" as a counterweight to Kissinger, one high-level intelligence source said.

The administration officials said Ford had been considering the shakeup for four to six weeks before a news leak forced him to make it public Monday. They said he secretly told Kissinger and Rumsfeld Oct. 25.

These sources said Ford summoned Colby Saturday at 8 a.m., fired him and offered him the post of ambassador to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, but Colby declined.

Two Offers Declined
They said Ford then summoned Schlesinger, fired him and offered him jobs with the Export-Import Bank or as ambassador to Australia. Schlesinger declined both offers, the administration officials said.

Another source close to the White House told UPI the immediate cause of Schlesinger's ouster was probably his angry denunciation of the House Appropriations Committee for slashing the Pentagon budget.

But he said the inner circle of Ford advisers — the "transition group" which includes former defense secretary Melvin Laird and Rumsfeld — had urged Ford even earlier, on Oct. 16, to stop the bickering between Kissinger and Schlesinger.

This source said they advised Ford: "Knock heads and take command."

Guess What He Calls It
John Bellamy, a Newport Beach, Calif., businessman who says he has opened 41 restaurants and bars, has sunk his teeth into a new project — Jaws Inc. The Costa Mesa, Calif., bar and dance spot opened last weekend and the entrance is designed as the mouth of a shark. Bellamy makes no bones about his hopes of cashing in on the shark craze.

N.Y. Times Summary

Canal Lobby Growing Problem

Washington — A pressure group against the Ford administration's plans to transfer control of the American-built Panama Canal to the Republic of Panama is gradually growing and includes two potential presidential candidates — Ronald Reagan and George Wallace. A concerned government official in Washington said the "Panama Canal lobby" confronts the administration with a serious problem. What the lobby lacks in cohesiveness of its disparate elements it makes up for in the virulence of its rhetoric.

Polls Shows America Disagrees

New York — A nationwide public opinion poll last weekend by The New York Times and CBS News indicated that most Americans disagree with President Ford's assumptions that New York City's financial crisis is a special case and the default would have only local impact. By margins of more than two to one, those surveyed said New York's problems resembled those of other cities and that default would have an impact on the national economy. Even among Republicans, a majority felt that the impact would be national and that federal aid should be offered.

Rocky To Campaign For Ford

Washington — White House officials close to both men said Vice President Rockefeller would campaign actively for President Ford's nomination as Republican candidate next year. It was reported that before Ford's Monday night news conference he telephoned Rockefeller to ask if he could count on active and continued political support and received an affirmative answer. However, sources close to Rockefeller said he would not campaign with any great enthusiasm for Ford.

Kremlin Welcomes Schlesinger Ouster

By The Associated Press

The Soviet press took a cautious wait-and-see stand Tuesday on President Ford's Cabinet reshuffle but indicated the ouster of Defense Secretary James Schlesinger was welcome in the Kremlin.

Newspapers in countries allied with the United States had mixed views on the impact of the changes on international affairs.

Official foreign comment was generally unavailable, with most governments regarding the changes as a matter of domestic politics.

In Moscow, the newspaper Izvestia said Schlesinger's replacement came as a surprise to many, indicating the Kremlin was among those caught off guard.

A Washington dispatch in the Soviet government paper said more time and detailed information would be needed before making "fuller conclusions about the reasons for the reshuffling and about its consequences."

By its selection of U.S. editorial comment, however, Izvestia indicated the departure of Schlesinger was viewed favorably. The defense secretary has been a frequent target of the Soviet press which portrayed him as a cold warrior who wanted to sabotage detente.

In West Germany the conservative daily, Die Welt, called the dismissal of Schlesinger "undoubtedly one of the darkest news items to circle the globe in recent months." It said the cabinet changes were the work of "an inglorious court intrigue" and headed by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

The influential Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung commented, "With Schlesinger's ouster, the brake on the SALT (Strategic Arms Limitation Talks) is being released by the American side." The paper also said Atlantic allies in Europe "have reason to regret Schlesinger's departure."

Right Floors Rocky Again

Despite claims of its demise, minority rule is still very much alive in this country. The fact that minority positions still carry weight in America is consistent with some of the philosophies of our founding fathers and it is a condition that we hope endures as long as the nation.

But in the instance at hand, the abdication of Vice President Rockefeller, the minority triumph will boomerang against those who caused it — apparently not to their regret, because they ignore the obvious consequences with a death-wish resolution.

A minority of a minority party has placed an able vice president of the United States in such a politically untenable position that he voluntarily removed himself from consideration as a member of the ticket in 1976. Conservative Republicans have stopped Rockefeller before — most spitefully in 1964 — and they have stopped him again.

In so doing, they have hurt themselves in two ways: they have probably helped to secure the GOP presidential nomination for the conservative-to-moderate Gerald Ford instead of for their favorite, the neanderthal conservative Ronald Reagan, a political flim-flam man. And in forcing Rockefeller out, the conservatives have almost guaranteed — especially if Reagan somehow becomes Ford's running mate — the defeat of the GOP ticket in November, 1976.

Nelson Rockefeller helped to broaden the base of a political party that has a perilously narrow political base despite the electoral successes of Richard Nixon and partly because of his sins. Rockefeller to many Americans gives substance and security to the Ford administration and we think that would have been translated into votes next year. With someone less well-known than Rockefeller, or with someone on the ticket to the right of Ford, especially if it is Reagan — or if Reagan is the presidential nominee — Republican chances suffer.

Conservatives who despise Rockefeller may savor his dropping out as a victory for the moment, as an ideological purge which purifies the party, but in the long run it will have damaging consequences.

The Rate-Setting Shuffle

State Sen. John Cavanaugh III of Omaha lectured his colleagues in scathing terms Tuesday on the issue of setting tax rates. He made a great deal of sense as opposed to the arguments of those who continue to insist that the Legislature doesn't duck responsibility by refusing to set tax rates, and that the State Board of Equalization's tax-setting role is merely a "mechanical" thing.

At the federal level and in other states, legislative bodies set tax rates to provide revenues because they also determine expenditures. Cavanaugh is among those in Nebraska who think this state should do likewise instead of the state board setting rates in November after the Legislature adjourns.

Senators are fooling only themselves, Cavanaugh implied, when they tell their constituents "we (the Legislature) provide you with all these wonderful services, but it's the State Board of Equalization and the governor who set those ridiculously high tax rates . . .

"The people don't believe that," Cavanaugh said, "and you look like a liar, a fraud and a fool when you tell them that."

Cavanaugh said the Legislature should "pay for the bills it incurs" by setting the tax rates, instead of "scurrying for the bushes."

In a sense it is a "mechanical" thing, as Sen. Richard Marvel argues. The state board sets the taxes according to what legislative appropriations require. But the appearances are that the board is politically responsible for the rates, not the Legislature — even when the Legislature instructs the board what rates to set, as it did earlier this year when senators placed a ceiling on the income tax rate at an unrealistically low 12% and thus caused the cash flow problems the state faces today.

The Legislature is ducking responsibility by not setting tax rates and the people know it.

A Gerdes Memorial

A resolution introduced by State Sen. Roland Luedtke of Lincoln suggests that the new state office building here be named in memory of the late George C. Gerdes of Alliance. Gerdes, who died in August of 1973, was a state senator from 1958 to 1968, and until his death he was head of the unicameral staff.

The Gerdes name would dignify and give meaning to the new building.

A recitation of his accomplishments is not necessary in this space. Anyone familiar with the workings of state government over the past few decades knows that Gerdes was an uncommonly great public servant and man, deserving of a lasting memorial.

We hope the state will decide to name the new office building in memory of George Gerdes.

Our present water rates are a big rip-off and ridiculous. There is no reasonable explanation for a rate such as this. The residents of Lincoln should protest en masse and demand a refund on the excessive profits being made by the Water Department.

According to a recent article that appeared in The Star, the Water Board had to have six months to restudy the rates before they could do anything about them. Isn't it about time to retire this board and get a progressive board that will have the compassion to treat the users reasonably?

Lincoln used to enjoy one of the lowest rates in the whole United States, but not any more. Originally the first water board was set up to search for an abundant supply of water and for a reasonable rate.

It started in the late 1920's. When Commissioner William Schroeder was in charge of the City Water and Light Department, he became concerned when the only available supply was from the Antelope Valley. With the first well drilled in that area, they found the water within about five feet of the surface, and with the last well drilled, they found the water table had dropped to about 90 feet.

At that time the residents of Lincoln were warned to go slow on using water and later they had to restrict the usage to all users until they solved the problem.

They had the City Engineering Department start in cold winter weather surveying east and west to find the best way to bring water into the city. After quite a study, they found that Ashland was the best area to work on, to bring in water from the Platte River Valley.

Dr. Condra had made a number of tests and a map of Nebraska of underground water over the state, and it was found that the Platte River had an abundant supply of water. Due to its unique nature, it has a deep bed of sand and gravel across the state and more water flows below the surface than above it.

In about 1933 a water main was laid and completed to bring in a good supply of water. Since that time, another larger main has been laid.

The Water Board's excuse for this last rate schedule is to cut down on the usage of water so they don't run out of water on some heavy demand days. To solve this, they should have the City Council pass an ordinance that users should go by even and odd numbered days to coincide with their addresses through the summer months. Many cities and towns have this and it works out very well. Many people are happy with it.

There is no reason why anyone should be charged 50¢ and 75¢ for 100 cu. ft. (750 gallons) of water, which means one cent for 10 gallons on the higher rate. One cannot accept this when it costs only two to four cents to pump a thousand gallons.

In checking a few wells with which farmers are irrigating, the costs are about that stated above and they lift water 200 feet. The same as the city does.

Why should we let Lincoln become part of the Great American Desert and lose all the trees, grass and flowers over this? What sort of welcome can Lincoln offer to people who would like to live here, with such a water rate as we have now?

If our present Water Board could give us rain when we need it, well and good. But, thank God, they cannot control the weather. So let's get with it and do something before it is too late.

WASHINGTON — The hand that sacrificed Nelson Rockefeller to the right wing of the Republican Party — if that is what Gerald Ford has done — also reached out strongly to the moderate Republican center. At first glance, the result seems to strengthen Ford's chances for renomination, and to raise the possibility of a Ford-Ronald Reagan ticket next year.

There is no doubt that the White House takes the possibility of a Reagan challenge seriously. When Howard "Bo" Callaway, Ford's campaign manager, was asked on Sunday which Democrat the President expected to have to run against in 1976, Callaway declined to answer on grounds that to do so could only boost the Democrat he named.

"But there's not one I'm afraid of," he said. "I'll just be glad to get one of them instead of Ronald Reagan."

Callaway had just described Reagan as a formidable Republican primary opponent who would run strongly in two of the earliest primaries, New Hampshire and Florida. These remarks together suggest the extent to which the potential Reagan candidacy is perceived in the Ford camp as the biggest threat to the President's reelection.

But if that strategic judgment was the motivating force behind the high level shake-up of the Ford administration, it was immediately apparent only in the withdrawal of Rockefeller. He has been a bad word to the Republican right wing since 1964, and if his pull-out proves to have been forced by Ford, it might be effective in holding the support of some conservatives against a Reagan challenge. However it came about, Rockefeller's departure opens the way for the vice presidency to be offered to Reagan himself, if necessary.

Reagan As Opponent 'Formidable'

"I KNOW NOT WHAT COURSE OTHERS WILL TAKE; BUT AS FOR ME, GIVE ME THE PRESIDENCY OR THE VICE PRESIDENCY!"

The dismissal of James R. Schlesinger as secretary of defense can hardly be a comfort to conservatives, since Schlesinger was the leading administration skeptic as to Kissinger's version of détente, and one of the few Ford officials with the intellectual stature to stand up to the secretary of state.

Ford filled the opening at the Pentagon with a Republican generally considered a moderate, Donald Rumsfeld; replaced William Colby, an embarrassment as the director of the CIA in its days of disrepute, with another moderate, George Bush; and sent Elliott Richardson, whom many conservatives regard as the man who blew the whistle on Richard Nixon, to the Department of Commerce. It's doubtful that any of these changes amused Barry Goldwater fans.

Callaway, speaking in Florida to a group of businessmen meeting there, developed a non-ideological theme as he waxed lyrical about Ford. His greatest asset, Callaway said of the President, was that he had restored respect for the White House and the government — first, by being "just a guy that everybody likes," second, by his "courageous" vetoes of spending bills and his stand against "bailing out" New York City.

"Even if you don't always agree with this President," Callaway said, in what sounded rather like a slogan, "You've got to admire his courage. He stands up for what he believes." Not bad in this time of political cynicism.

But whether that sort of thing will sustain Ford against Reagan in Florida — which Callaway conceded was "a perfect state for Ronald Reagan, probably his best state" — is dubious at best. Three thousand unemployed workers a week — at least 35,000 since July — are using up their unemployment benefits here. That means each has been unemployed at least 65 weeks, the maximum for which benefits can be paid; and this state's unemployment still stands at 12.4%. Neither Ford's courageous vetoes nor his "new team" may do him much good if Florida is no better off next March.

The Elderly Victims

WASHINGTON — The most pathetic victims of the economic squeeze are the elderly, who have worked hard all their lives for pensions that were supposed to take care of them during their sunset years.

Inflation has stripped these pensions of their value and has left hundreds of thousands of retired workers desperately impoverished. Even more hopeless are those without pensions who must survive on starvation Social Security benefits.

On Capitol Hill, the new House Select Aging Committee is supposed to be solving the problems of the elderly. The committee has spent more than $145,000 this year to seek solutions. Yet it hasn't prepared a single official report nor made a single formal recommendation.

One reason is that Chairman William Randall, D-Mo., has turned the committee payroll into a refuge for witch hunters from the extinct House Internal Security Committee. At least four of the Aging Committee's top staff members, including staff director Bob Horner, are retracts from the Internal Security Committee.

Their experience with geriatrics, except possibly for some elderly communists, is nonexistent.

Our inquiries stirred Chairman Randall to rush off an emergency memo to his colleagues on the committee. Warned the chairman: "Bob Horner, staff director of the Committee on Aging, was interviewed by Bob Owens, a member of the staff of Jack Anderson, the columnist . . . Owens had in his possession a memorandum written by Mr. Horner to the staff . . .

"I think we can anticipate that there may be some critical comments concerning the Select Committee in the Anderson column. As a member of the Committee, you may receive press or constituent inquiries if there is such publicity. I felt it was my responsibility to notify you in advance of this eventuality . . ."

Randall insisted in his memo that "I am not in the least concerned about possible criticism, provided the criticism is accurate and constructive. I have no apologies to anyone for my administration of the Committee on Aging."

"As with any new venture of this kind, there are 'growing pains,' readjustments and problems. Progress may at times seem slow. On the other hand, I am confident that our staff is competent. Given a reasonable time, they will produce worthwhile results."

Randall admitted that he had hired the retracts because "they were highly recommended to me by my fellow Missourian, Dick Ichord, the former chairman of the Committee on Internal Security."

Meanwhile, the committee has shown more interest in staging roadshow hearings to get publicity for the members than in seeking serious solutions to the problems that are crushing the elderly.

CB Age Moving In

WASHINGTON — The automobile has always been an American's haven from the outside world, his private padded cell where he could savor solitude. But now it looks like that is changing. Fords and Chevies, Datsuns, Toyotas and even Volkswagen Beetles have sprouted antennae that make them look like giant cockroaches. The age of CB is upon us.

Citizens-band radio "has hit people like a disease," the manager of a Houston radio store told U.S. News & World Report. "Business is so good it's bad," another dealer told The Wall Street Journal. Industry can't meet more than half the demand for CB sets. And the Federal Communications Commission, which issues $4 CB licenses good for five years, has a nine-month backlog and a jammed switchboard. The number of new licenses jumped from 246,000 in 1973 to 425,000 last year, and in 1975 is expected to top one million. There are already some six million sets in use.

With a CB set in your auto, you can talk to anyone else who has one up to 10 miles away. Whether or not you will have anything to say to each other is another matter. Most mobile CB conversation centers around highway information — avoiding traffic jams, accidents and speed traps. "It's great for a week, but after that it's like listening to a third-rate talk show," complained one new user.

Since 1958, the government has reserved 23 broadcast channels for CB. Channel 11 is used to establish contact, after which a user can switch to any channel that is clear. Channel 9 is reserved for emergencies, and is used for some five million calls a year. Channel 10? Is generally used by truckers, those new folk heroes, who adopted CB and established much of the jargon that gives it its flavor. This includes colorful code names, from the "Chicken Choker" to the "Wabash Cannonball." Muhammad Ali, a CB enthusiast, styles himself the "Big Dopper."

It was the independent truckers' strike last year that gave CB its allure for "four-wheelers" — ordinary motorists. Millions watched on television as the truckers demonstrated how they used CB to organize their forces. But the truckers, for whom CB is a professional tool, may have done too good a job of popularizing it. Federal regulators are considering adding more CB channels in order to clear congestion on the airways.

New uses are being found for the citizens-band that make it more than just a fad. Missouri began experimenting last fall with CB-equipped police cars, and citizens' calls resulted in scores of arrests for offenses from drunk driving to kidnapping, as well as turning up road hazards, accidents, and stranded or injured motorists. Now the state has CB in all 175 of its highway patrol cars. Police in the Southwest, where CB use has jumped, also comment favorably.

Not that this new form of communication is without problems. The sets, which cost an average $160, are being stolen from cars in increasing numbers. FCC rules prohibit using the radios "as a hobby or diversion," but inevitably those nonpareil communicators, high-school girls with boyfriends, find it an attractive medium. That oldest of professions appears to be cashing in on the CB boom as well: the FCC has investigated reports of prostitutes soliciting over the air. So CB could end up fighting solitude in more ways than one.

DJ Out Of A Job

Lincoln, Neb. KFMQ really showed its true colors when it fired its only woman DJ, Miss Ann Perkinson. A progressive rock station, KFMQ is definitely not. A top 40 FM that resembles a top 20 AM, KFMQ unequivocally is.

To play the top 40 requires a human robot rather than a DJ with a personality. To fire someone because that person wants to do more than just push buttons is unjust and reprehensible.

It's time for an FM radio station without the "basic format." There is too much bubble-gum music as it is.

Let's unite and come up with an alternative. I know of one DJ looking for a job.

Hunter And Farmer

Wilber, Neb. The guns of autumn are sounding off, and there are violators by the score. Where are the birds? I am afraid they are a part of days gone by.

When the season opens, it may bring joy to the hunter, but there is no thrill for the livestock grower. He knows there is always the threat of trouble.

I am not blaming the hunter for all the trouble, but the law which does nothing about the violator. I think all good hunters will agree. If the law would crack down on the violator, we would have better hunting, and the hunter would have a better relationship with the country folk.

ROBERT DRDA

Dale Adams Staying On

Lincoln, Neb. It encourages me to know that Assistant Police Chief Dale Adams will remain with the Lincoln Police Department.

If we are to have a police department that we can feel secure with, then it is imperative that we have high police officials such as Dale Adams who is known for his unquestionable integrity. Politics and publicity too often enter into the police affairs and at times we are lost to speculation. During the "new police chief" issue, Dale Adams could have gone political via the news media, but did not. Without his even asking for support, he was given it by the people of Lincoln in full force.

We need more police officials who are more concerned with their work and can conduct themselves in an even low-toned fashion as he did.

Thanks to Dale Adams for staying!

CONCERNED CITIZEN

Considers Nader 'Fanatic'

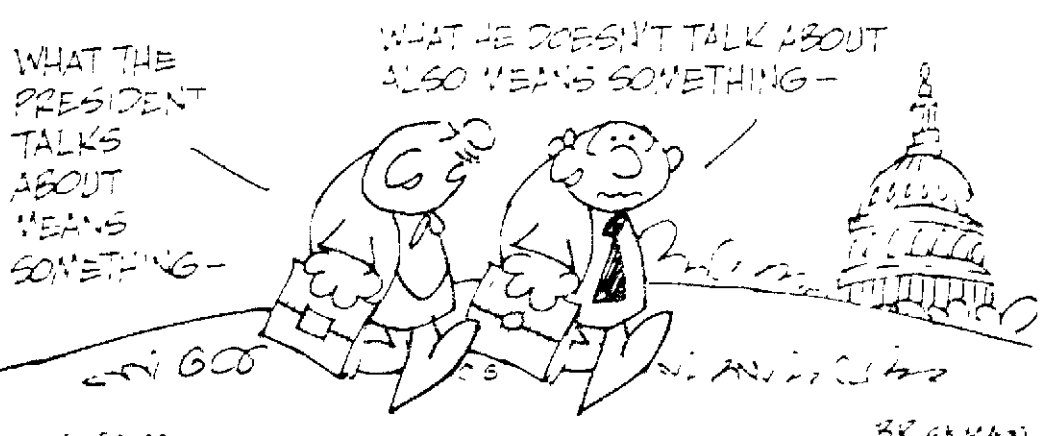

I see that the rantings of Ralph Nader still rate front-page space in The Star. It seems Nader feels that the White House did a political favor to the automobile industry by delaying mandatory air bags in new automobiles. It seems to me that the White House also did a big favor for the consumer in at least postponing an expensive item which hardly anyone wants to pay for.

New automobiles are already burdened with many extra dollars of cost and many extra pounds of weight from federally required items to protect us from ourselves. The result is that fewer people can afford new cars or afford to run them. The automobile industry suffers which means the economy suffers which means we all are hurt directly or indirectly.

Nader claims the absence of air bags is costing a lot of lives. It might be argued that with the cost of all these safety items driving new cars to even higher prices, the only car a large segment of the middle class can afford is a very small one. Small cars are much more likely to cause injury or death in a collision than a larger one even when two small ones collide with each other. How many lives will be lost by people who finally could afford nothing but a relatively less safe small car?

I believe it is a good idea to be skeptical of any fanatic, whatever his cause.

Shakeup May Have Diminished Power Of Bangladesh President

The New York Times

New Delhi, India — After two days of tense, high-level negotiations, the government of Bangladesh announced Tuesday a military realignment that apparently leaves President Kondakar Mushtaque Ahmed in office.

But according to some diplomatic assessments, Mushtaque Ahmed's power was diminished by the shakeup, in which the chief of the army general staff succeeded his superior officer, who had been the top-ranking man in the army.

Although the critically poor country remained virtually sealed off from the rest of the world, reports reaching New Delhi indicated that Bangladesh was generally calm and quiet.

Large-scale troop movements were reported during the day in Dacca, the capital, which is 900 miles southeast of here, and an unofficial curfew was being imposed. But there were no reports of shooting during the brief crisis.

An announcement on the government radio just before midnight said that Brigadier Khalio Musharraf had been elevated to army chief, with the new rank of major general.

It was termed "a presidential announcement," but the president's name was not mentioned, adding to the speculation here that Musharraf might be emerging as the strongman of the government, which came to power in a coup d'etat 2½ months ago.

In the power struggle that began early Monday, Musharraf is also thought to have dislodged the group of young majors who staged the coup last Aug. 15, which overthrew and killed Sheikh Mujibur Rahman.

However, Musharraf's ascent was thought here to portend no immediate change in the direction of the government, or in the lives of the 75 million people of Bangladesh, an impoverished swampy land the size of Wisconsin.

"It looks like a battle over who is running things, not over ideology," said a knowledgeable observer with long experience in Bangladesh, which used to be East Pakistan.

The man whom Musharraf replaced was Maj. Gen. Ziaur Rahman, who the radio said had resigned.

The radio announcement Tuesday evening ended two days of official silence on the internal dispute.

Brigitte Bardot Gives To Stork

Paris (UPI) — Actress Brigitte Bardot has come to the aid of a stranded stork that will winter in France's Savoy Alps instead of North Africa this year.

The actress sent a $115 check to the Chambers Society for the protection of animals to sustain the stork, which prefers to eat expensive froglegs. Hunters recently wounded the bird in the wing as it migrated across southeastern France and a passerby brought it to the humane society.

In a note to the president of the society Miss Bardot, who has become a noted friend of wildlife recently, said, "Take good care of our little stork. May it soon set out to find its friends and give them a big kiss from me."

Kidnapers Said Ready To Free Dutchman

Monasterevin, Ireland (UPI) — The kidnapers of Dutch industrialist Tiede Herrema, trapped for 15 days in a tiny, garbage-filled bedroom, are ready to free their hostage in exchange for safe conduct out of the country, a mediator said Tuesday.

Union leader Philip Flynn, selected as go-between by kidnapers Eddie Gallagher, 27, and Marian Coyle, 19, said he believed they now had only one demand "and that is safe passage."

Originally the kidnapers who abducted Herrema, 52, near his Limerick home Oct. 3 had demanded the release of three jailed Irish Republican Army members as the price for his life.

There was no indication the government had any intention of softening its terms of unconditional surrender.

Police camped downstairs in the besieged two-story house have turned it into a virtual military fortress with sandbags, bulletproof glass and protective screening.

They believe the plight of the trio upstairs has become intolerable with garbage and other debris piling up since police cornered them Oct. 21.

"The near freezing temperatures coupled with lack of sleep and the squalid conditions they are living in must have them in a pretty bad state now," one police officer said.

The kidnapers Monday asked for "headache" tablets. These were sent up.

"We are doing what we can to make things as comfortable as possible," a police spokesman said.

Justice Minister Patrick Cooney earlier said that "making them miserable is not going to help things get resolved."

Ex-Official Detained In Corruption Probe

.... Isabel Peron's Support Ebbs

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Police detained a former social welfare minister in a corruption investigation Tuesday as bedridden President Isabel Peron appeared to be losing support against those who seek to replace her with a more dynamic leader.

The embattled president remained hospitalized with a gall bladder condition for the second day, and the country's main opposition leader urged her to resign.

Meanwhile, two powerful bombs exploded before dawn and seriously damaged a Communist party office where art works by leftist artists were on display. There were no injuries.

The leading figure in the huge Peronist labor movement, Lorenzo Miguel, has reportedly agreed not to insist that Mrs. Peron remain in office, and one commentator said that Miguel urged her to quit.

"Lorenzo is loyal but he is also smart," said a leading source in Miguel's Metalworkers Union. "Organized labor is something permanent and we must look after the interests of millions of workers."

Former Social Welfare Minister Rodolfo Roballo was detained on orders from a federal judge probing for corruption in the vast ministry.

Roballo was minister from July 21 to Aug. 11 after Jose Lopez Rega, Mrs. Peron's most trusted aide, was forced from the post. Lopez Rega is now in Spain.

The judge also ordered the detention of Lopez Rega's secretary, Horacio Vazquez, but police could not find him.

The 44-year-old president was hospitalized Monday with an acute gall bladder problem and nervous strain. She was reported in no danger.

A number of major detractors contend that the president, apart from her health problems, is not equipped to run the country.

Ricardo Balbin, head of the major opposition party and one who has long backed Mrs. Peron as a means to assure constitutional order, told a television audience: "If the president does not understand the problem, does not understand the country, then she cannot continue governing."

He called the situation Argentina's Watergate, referring to wide charges of scandal in Mrs. Peron's administration, including a specific accusation she diverted public charity funds for her personal use.

One newspaper noted that, between illnesses and vacations, Mrs. Peron went to her downtown office on fewer than 125 days so far this year and often only for a few hours at a time.

The president has developed intestinal and digestive problems, apparently from continuous nervous strain, well-informed medical sources say. She returned Oct. 16 from a 32-day health leave.

Military leaders have remained silent throughout the crisis, but well-informed military sources say there is growing pressure among young officers for a takeover if a solution is not reached quickly.

Mrs. Peron still has the backing of a conservative sector of the movement founded by her late husband, Juan D. Peron. Some in the movement contend that she is Peron's chosen successor and that her name is necessary for the movement's survival.

Israeli Unit, Guerrillas In Lebanon Trade Shots

By United Press International
An Israeli army unit patrolling the northern frontier exchanged gunfire with Arab guerrillas in southern Lebanon Tuesday, the Israeli military command said.

It was the first such encounter reported in the region in five weeks. It came as Beirut reports indicated a cease-fire between rival Moslem and Christian militiamen was finally holding after seven weeks of bloody fighting.

The exchange began about 7:30 a.m. When the guerrillas fired a single bazooka rocket at the Israeli patrol near the village of Shetula, about half a mile from the Lebanese frontier, the command said. It said the Israelis immediately returned fire.

No Israeli casualties were reported in the brief incident.

The last previous clash reported in the region occurred Sept. 27, when an Israeli unit killed three guerrillas near the village of Hanita.

On the political front, a government official in Jerusalem said Israel has sent an official message to Washington expressing its displeasure over recent statements about Jews and Zionism by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

During his visit to the United States, Sadat has said Zionism has brought bitterness and warfare to the Middle East and that in the early 1950s Jews controlled much of the Egyptian economy.

"Such expressions do not confirm to the spirit of the agreement," the official said, referring to the interim peace accord Israel and Egypt signed Sept. 4. "Israel expects the United States to convey to Egypt our displeasure on this."

The official said the message was conveyed by the Israeli embassy in Washington.

Among the provisions of the interim accord is an article calling on both countries to tone down political and propaganda attacks on each other. The agreement also provided for American aid to Egypt and Israel.

In Jacksonville, Fla., Egyptian President Anwar Sadat said Tuesday he was "quite satisfied" with his discussions with President Ford and other U.S. officials. But he gave no indication whether he had won a promise of American arms aid.

The proposal, which Egyptian officials said had 14 other sponsors, urged reconvening the Geneva conference "in the near future, with the participation of all parties concerned."

The PLO's position is that the Geneva conference was established under the terms of a Security Council resolution that does not mention the Palestinians, only the problem of refugees in the area.

To Your Good Health:

Cornea Transplant Can Restore Sight

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.
Dear Dr. Thosteson: Could you explain to me what a cornea transplant is? What is done to the eyes? How long is the recovery period?

If a person needed this operation and didn't have it done, would he lose his eyesight? Also, when a person is past 50, how often should he have an eye examination? — Mrs. V.G.

The cornea is the transparent portion of the front covering of the eyeball. It lies over the pupil. If it becomes clouded from injury or as a result of some eye disorder, the transparency is, of course, lessened, and eyesight reduced. Progressive clouding would lead to total blindness in the affected eye.

In a corneal transplant, a donated healthy cornea from a deceased person is used to replace the damaged one. It has become a rather commonly performed procedure, and the success rate for suitable patients is quite good.

However, only one blind person in every 25 is considered a suitable patient. The candidate is considered one whose blindness is due to corneal damage only and not to diseases within the eyeball. The operation is made possible through a network of eye banks set up across the country, which collect the healthy corneas.

The operation normally requires hospitalization of up to 10 days, and complete rest for up to three weeks following surgery. But this can vary, as can the period of healing and restoration of visual acuity. It is often many months before the degree of success of the operation can be judged.

An eye examination should be a routine part of any general physical at any age. For a person past 50, an annual examination is advisable. This is the age when most cases of developing glaucoma, for example, can be detected — and treated.

HEALTH TIP
FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

Eye infections are becoming less common because pneumonia and other infections are becoming less common, reports the Nebraska Medical Association.

Nevertheless, infections and injuries may occur. Care of eyes is important and should be checked regularly. Medical attention should be sought, when injuries or infection happen.

Eyes have great endurance and most often withstand enormous use without damage, reports the Nebraska Medical Association.

Television has no harmful effect on the eyes, but to prevent fatigue the room should be moderately lighted.

Students can use their eyes extensively providing they are used under proper conditions. Studying should be done at a properly lighted desk. Usually a hundred-watt bulb over the left side above the desk provides good illumination. Reading in bed requires a backrest to permit an almost vertical position with proper lighting.

The Nebraska Medical Association says that near-sighted children should always wear their glasses for close work and should not read in bed under any circumstances.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it possible for a person who is anemic to have hypertension at the same time?—Miss A.O.G.

The person with severe anemia usually has fatigue and a general depression of bodily functions. He would tend toward a low blood pressure rather than high.

But it is possible to have high blood pressure (hypertension) along with anemia, although there is no direct connection between the two. Their causes are different.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: A long time ago, I read in your column something regarding craving for ice cubes being related to anemia. I was craving ice cubes and, in fact, did have anemia.

My doctor had not heard of this, and I don't think he believes me. Did I read correctly? — V.B.

You did. The craving for ice or for any unusual items — starch, soul, etc. — is called "pica," and it is often associated with an anemia or a deficiency in the diet. The deficiency is often of a mineral type.

Treatment of the anemia and correction of the faulty dietary practices usually takes care of the problem.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can you tell me what effect beer would have on diverticulosis?—R.P.

Liquid is important in diverticulosis. An occasional beer should have no ill effect. However, diverticulosis patients should avoid laxatives when possible. If you are one in whom beer produces flatulence and loose bowel movements, then it should be avoided.

Forgive me if I seem overly suspicious, but I rather suspect that your doctor has ruled out beer for you, and for just such reasons as I mention. So don't take my comments as any free pass to beer drinking.

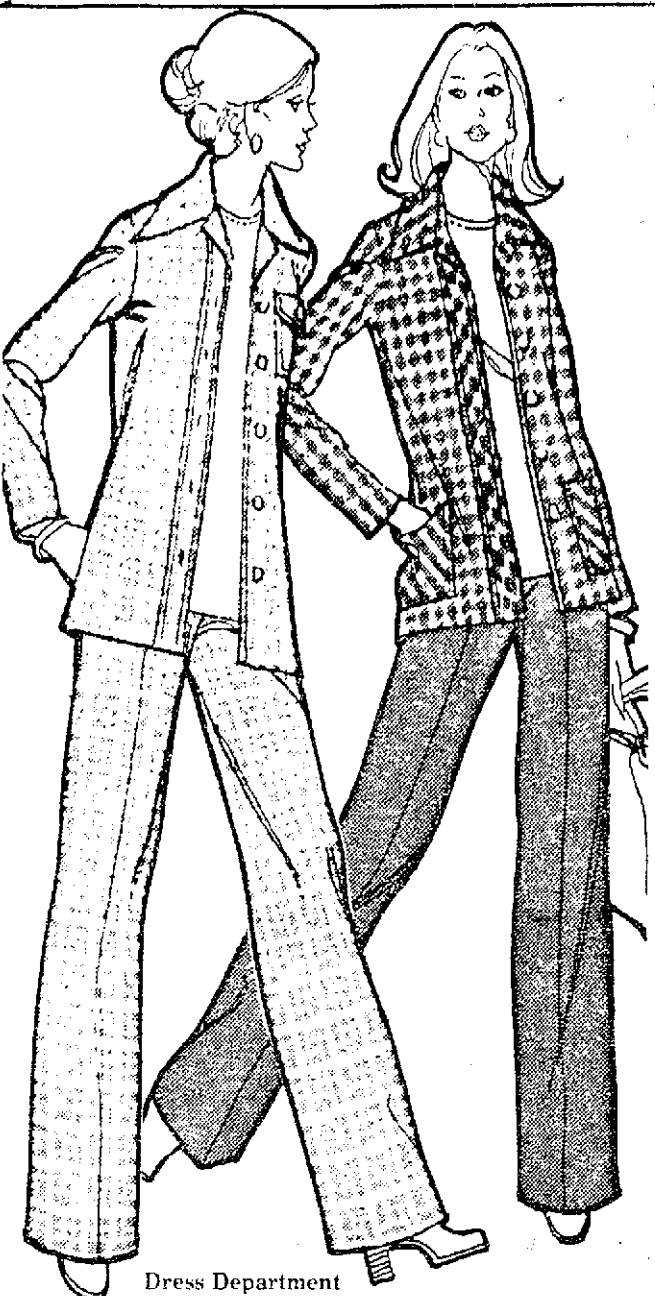

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What is the relationship between shingles and chicken pox? Can an older person get shingles from a child with chicken pox? Can children have shingles? Can older persons have chicken pox? Is shingles a nerve disorder? — I.T.

Both are virus-caused diseases and the viruses are quite similar but not identical. There is always some confusion over this. Both diseases are spread by droplet, as are colds, flu and other viruses. Although the evidence is not clear, adults have been known to contract shingles after being exposed to a child with chicken pox, and children have been known to develop chicken pox after exposure to an adult with shingles. Both diseases can occur at any age.

Shingles is considered a form of neuritis, since the virus attacks a ganglion — a knot-like nerve root. The medical term is herpes zoster, from the Greek words for "creep" and "girdle." The symptoms usually occur at the waist area, usually on one side only.

Do gravel trucks have to be covered when going down a highway? I've had my car windshield pitted several times when gravel blows out or falls out of these big trucks.

—A. M. Woodward, Blue Hill

ACTION LINE: There are at least two state statutes that deal with your problem, according to State Patrol Traffic Sergeant David Wolbert. Any substance that is less than two inches in diameter (that includes gravel but not larger rocks) and extends above the sides of the truck bed in which it is being carried must be covered by some sort of tarp. Even if the load doesn't extend above the bed, another statute states that the load must not sift or leak out of the truck onto the road. Wolbert said the State Patrol has increased its efforts recently to enforce these statutes, but violators are so numerous that not every one is nabbed.

My son cannot seem to get the refund on his 1972 federal income taxes. We have written many times. The government finally wrote back this year and said he never filed for that year. I then sent them a registered letter with a copy of his 1972 return. But still no word. Believe me, they don't hesitate to collect when you owe them, with interest.

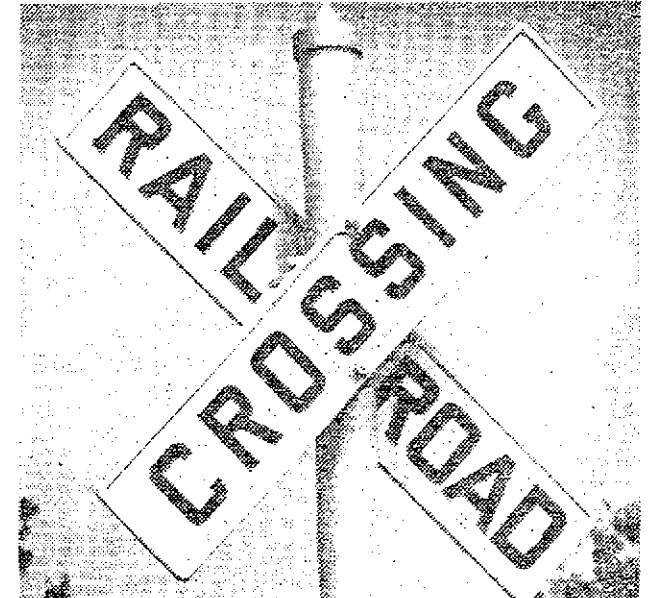

—Mrs. Dorothy Johnson, Red Cloud

ACTION LINE: There are several possible reasons for the delay, but the Internal Revenue Service promises you a quick answer if you'll just give them a call. A spokesman for the tax information division of the IRS regional office in Omaha said your son's return might have been lost in the mail. If you marked the copy of the return you sent them as a duplicate, IRS may still be looking for the original and that often takes as long as eight weeks, the spokesman said. She suggested you call the Omaha office's toll-free number, 800-642-9960, and said that office should be able to answer all your questions about the refund.

Our neighborhood needs some help getting the railroad crossing at 5th and C Sts. fixed. The crossing is very rough and dangerous. We have called the railroad and the city all summer and it still isn't fixed.

—Mrs. Roy Bourg, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: You should have smooth sailing, or rather smoother driving, by the time you read this. Larry Ficke, asst. maintenance superintendent for the Burlington Northern Railroad, said there have been other complaints about the 5th and C crossing. He said that the crossing was to have been repaired last Friday and that he would double check to confirm that the work was done. Please contact ACTION LINE again if you have further complaints about the crossing.

More than a year ago we sent a Westinghouse room air conditioner to Allied Electric of Lincoln to be repaired. It was still under the manufacturer's guarantee. Every time we've asked Allied about it, we've been told the firm is waiting for a part in Omaha where it was taken to be fixed. In August we were told it was to be ready Sept. 15, but we've heard nothing. Can Action Line help?

—J.E. Jorgensen, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Harry Hansen, manager of Allied Electric, 1418 O St., said he's contacted the Westinghouse warranty service center in Omaha several times about the repairs. Hansen said he was told each time that the firm was waiting for parts before it could repair and return your air conditioner. A check with Ed Clary, satellite service supervisor for Westinghouse in Omaha, revealed that there are several problems causing the delay. Clary said their records show that they didn't receive the appliance from Allied Electric until July 1, 1975, not a year ago as you stated in your letter. Although the air conditioner may have been in warranty when you took it to Allied, the warranty had expired by the time it arrived in Omaha. Clary said he agreed to repair it anyway, even though Allied is not a Westinghouse factory authorized service center. He said the compressor needed for your model was ordered July 2 and hasn't arrived yet from the factory. The compressor manufacturer promised Westinghouse the part by Oct. 13, but Clary said the part still might not arrive for several months. He said yours would be the first to be repaired when the part arrives.

We contracted with Charlie's Tree Service to have some tree work done after a storm in July. A man came over while they were removing a tree at a neighbor's house and asked to be paid for our work then. We paid because their workmen had done some work for us before. They were supposed to come back to our place and trim dead limbs from two trees but have never been back. I've called and called and all I get is the run around.

—Mrs. Bernard Sherman, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: A spokesman for Charlie's Tree Service, 1901 So. 47th St., said Charlie's plans to trim the limbs at your home next week. Contact ACTION LINE again if you don't get any action.

ACTION TIP: During the worst of the energy crisis, many people began storing gasoline in containers in their homes or the trunks of their cars. Some of these containers, called "jerry-cans," were made of plastic and were a fire hazard. The federal government has since developed guidelines for storing gasoline and other products in plastic containers and made them available to the public in a booklet titled "Plastic Containers for Petroleum Products." For your copy, send 45c to Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

MONTGOMERY WARD

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplaine

San Francisco — Here's a bright autumn day. Crisp as a new dollar. "Ideal day to be with friends," says my newspaper horoscope. "Accept any invitations."

I watched the gulls fishing in the sunlit water and waited for the phone to ring. I had my acceptance speech ready: "Really? I was just thinking of you. Of course I'll come."

The telephone did not jingle. Did not ring with joyous tidings. I picked up the receiver — it could be out of order. Dial tone came on strong. I dialed for time: "The time is — 12 noon."

I went in the kitchen and poured a little cooking sherry. A horoscope like mine gone to waste.

I haven't had a bird since our silent budge made a jail break and flew away refusing to talk to the last.

We have woodpeckers around here but we let the mama woodpecker raise them. Even a woodpecker knows enough not to raise little woodpeckers in a flower pot.

I could write a book about birds myself. The hours I spent trying to get that budge to talk. I bought records of budgies talking. The bird could listen and be ashamed of himself not saying a blooming word. I called him on the telephone — for him the phone bells tolled but not for me — and I urged him to imitate my voice.

About this time, Al Williams was running the famous Papagayo Room. He had a cage full of parrots who could jabber like mad. Discuss the football scores.

Al took one of his parrots to a vet where, in the middle of the night, the bird woke the neighbors screaming: "Murder! Murder!"

Along came the blue suit Johnny Nabs. And sure enough they collared a pair of burglars.

The best of all this was that the bird was not crying: "Murder!" He was saying a word in Spanish that sounds like murder. A very bad word. For this was a bad bird who only picked up bad words.

So I gave the budge a choice of choice words I learned in more heedless years of youth. I gave him his choice in several languages.

But he kept his lip buttoned. And when he finally broke out of the cage slammer, I shouted after him: "Sayonara, you so-and-so." He didn't even turn his silent head.

(c) Chronicle Publ. Co. 1975

A review book in the morning mail. I don't know how I get on review lists. For a year or so I was on the list for dog books. "How To Train Your Retriever." "House Breaking Your Puppy."

I had no dog at the time. When I did get a dog, I had fallen off the dog list. I was on a cook book review list. I could have whipped up the dog a grand soufflé Grand Marpier, but he preferred horse meat.

Today's book is about birds. I'd like to get on a cat book list — that I could use.

"When you try to raise young woodpeckers in a flower pot, you will find they cannot climb after they have left the nest. Their claws have been worn down by the hard surface of the pot to which evolution has not adapted them."

"You will have to bring them up in a wooden box if you want them to be normal."

I often wonder how they pick me out for these lists. What mailing list has figured out that I raise woodpeckers and have a handy flower pot?

Polygamist Camps On Federal Land

GLEN CANYON CITY, Utah (AP) — Led by a polygamist, a diverse group of would-be homesteaders has fought the Bureau of Land Management to a temporary standoff over the right to continue living in house trailers, wooden shacks and tents on federal land near here.

For more than six months, Alexander Joseph, his young wives and dozens of followers have camped in a remote canyon the government says cannot support human life. The settlers acknowledge their crops have failed and their homesteads are "trashy," but they say the government has restricted their efforts to fully utilize the land.

The government says they are trespassers with no legal basis for their actions, and a federal judge has upheld the government's position. One federal official suggested that since the land is poor the settlers' true motive is to get publicity.

Whatever the merits of the conflicting claims, the case features armed men who threaten a fight if an attempt is made to evict them. And it represents a challenge to the Interior Department's prerogative of deciding what lands are available for homesteading.

Joseph, 39, who wears his long brown hair in an Indian-style head band, says he loves America and obeys its laws. He says it is the BLM that has been in violation of the law.

He and other settlers wear pistols and carry rifles, and have threatened to use them if their land is taken. So far, there has been no violent confrontation with authorities.

A federal court in Salt Lake City so far has allowed a dozen or so families to stay, pending their appeal of its decision in a BLM suit to evict them, if they do not further alter the land.

A newsman counted at least 50 homesteaders, including women and children, in the area. Joseph says there are at least 90 homesteaders, living various lifestyles.

"I have a kingdom here," he said, "but it's a voluntary kingdom. Everybody does what he wants to do."

The BLM is resisting new arrivals, saying it has returned $10 deposits from 113 other homesteading applicants around the country.

Claims have been filed for more than 33,000 acres of land north of Lake Powell, including some National Park Service land and areas planned as a possible site for the Kaiparowits plant, a proposed coal-fired facility to supply power to California and Arizona.

The original claims, and the only ones so far occupied, lie along the lightly flowing Paria River in Cottonwood Canyon. A dirt road winds through the high cliffs and monument-like rock outcroppings.

"They've started calling this Joseph's coat of many colors," says Joseph as he surveys the multicolored rock walls around the claims. The quarter-mile-wide canyon floor is splashed with autumn color.

A crimson peak marks Joseph's homestead. It extends into a sheer canyon where western movies are filmed and where Joseph says he has built a concrete bunker for protection.

Cottonwood Canyon is a short-cut between Bryce Canyon National Park and Lake Powell in Southern Utah. The BLM sets it aside for livestock and recreation, and it has more than 18,000 visitors a year.

"If I were going to homestead in this area, that canyon would probably be about the last spot I'd look at," said Jeff Steele, a BLM official at nearby Kanab. "You just couldn't cut it out there, even if you owned all of the homesteads," he said, referring to the area's limited rainfall, flash flooding and lack of water rights.

The homesteaders say that, if given a chance, they could harness flash floods with a silt dam and bring the area to life.

Joseph said it is one of the few places he has been able to live without harassment for his belief in plural marriage. He has claimed 13 wives, but said his first and two others left him and one was sent away because she couldn't get along with the others. That leaves none.

"Polygamy in Southern Utah is about as much news as Zionism in Israel," he said.

Although the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon), which accounts for a large percentage of Utah's population, discontinued polygamy long ago, some persons still practice it. Joseph is an excommunicated Mormon who says he now is presiding elder of his own "Church of Jesus Christ in Solemn Assembly."

Activities of Joseph and his followers have not caused much stir among other persons living in the area. But the Kane County Commission has issued a statement calling Joseph and his followers "squatters" and asking for their eviction.

"We oppose their action that has been taken without consideration for the land, the law or the people of Kane County," said James W. Carrico, the commission chairman.

LONDON (AP) — Santa's mightiest helper, her majesty's post office, is being depicted as Ebenezer Scrooge and accused of trying to kill off the British-born Christmas card.

Greeting card manufacturers and retailers and charitable organizations dependent on the sale of Christmas cards and seals are predicting a drastic slump in sales because postage stamps cost almost double what they did a year ago. Two increases, in March and September, have boosted second class letters from 3½ pence (7 cents) to 6½ (13 cents) and first class from 4½ (9 cents) to 8½ pence (17 cents).

"This is the start of the death of the Christmas card," warned Mrs. Marion Green, secretary of the National Federation of Old Age Pensioners, which like 97 other charities selling cards has been petitioning the post office to issue a special 5 pence (10 cent) Christmas stamp.

Although the battle for a cheaper Christmas postal rate has been taken up by Lord Peddie, chairman of the Post Office Users National Council, and brought to the floor of the House of Commons by a group of Conservative members, Post Office Chairman Sir William Ryland has remained staunch in his contention that a five-pence stamp would cost the government a loss of five million pounds ($10 million).

Last month the post office unveiled its special Christmas stamps, showing one angel with a mandolin on the first class issue, and two with lutes on the second class stamp, but with no reduction in price.

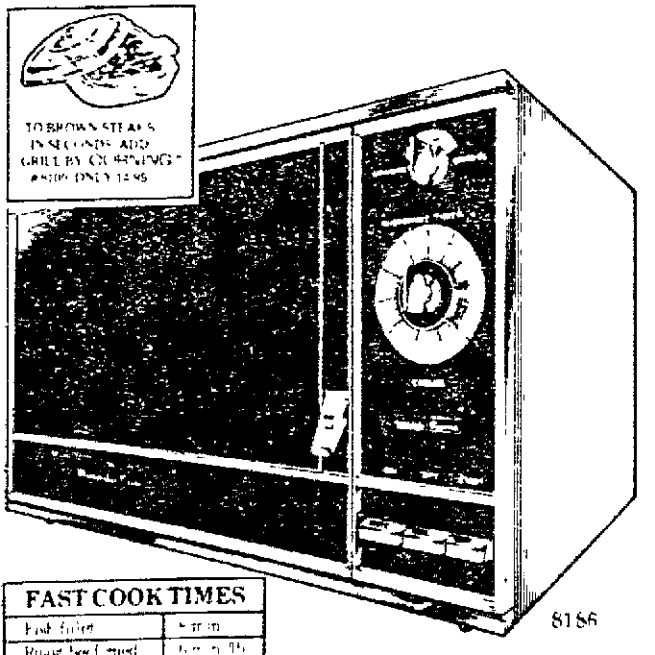

A London newspaper came up with its own version of the 1975 Christmas stamp. It showed Scrooge in his nightcap over Dickens' words: "A squeezing, wrenching, grasping, scraping, clutching, covetous old sinner..."

During the peak Christmas season, Dec. 13-24, the British post office handles 100 million letters a day, in contrast to a normal daily volume of 30 million.

"For very many years, Christmas time has not produced more than a break-even situation," said a post office spokesman, "because of the extra vehicles, temporary help and overtime payments needed to cope with the rush."

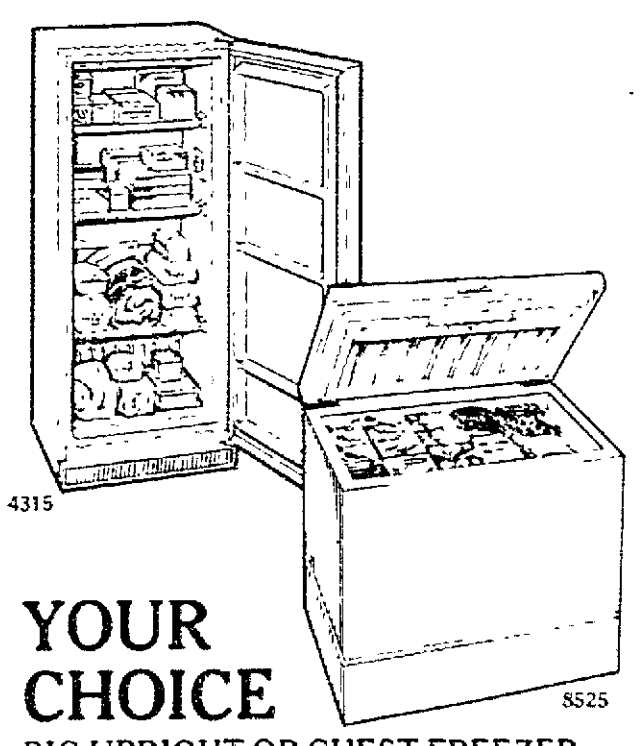

Meanwhile, a rebellion seemed to be gathering on the Christmas mailing front. More than 250 firms, led by Reader's Digest and Blackwell's, the Oxford book sellers, formed themselves into a mail users association to fight for a "more efficient post service" and investigate alternate ways of delivering their wares.

Blackwells revealed it already was beating the increased rates by air freighting its mail orders to New York for posting, throughout the United States, which accounts for 60 per cent of its overseas sales. Many Britons were also shipping their Christmas cards off in bulk to Ireland, the Isle of Man and the Channel Islands, where stamps are a few pennies cheaper, for remailing back to England.

County Will Join In Women's Panel

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

Lancaster county commissioners voted unanimously to join with the mayor on a planned City-County Commission on the Status of Women. But not without some lighthearted debate.

"Men are slowly getting pushed out," said Commissioner Bob Colin, a self-described male chauvinist. "What is this commission going to do besides take over everything?"

"It's going to figure out how to take over," answered Chairman Jan Gauger, who had asked commissioners to approve the joint venture.

Commissioner Bruce Hamilton reminded Colin that former Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf refused to support such a commission for several years, "and he's not around any more."

The 25-member proposed commission, headed by Bobbi McGinn, will explore problems facing women in the city and county.

Mayor Helen Boosalis, who announced the creation of a city commission last week, said she thinks the joint city and county commission is a good idea.

Both men and women will be appointed to the commission, Mayor Boosalis said.

In other action the board agreed to hold a public hearing on budget changes involving a group of federal grants and the City-County Human Services Department.

Problems arose in at least four grants to the Juvenile Court and the Pretrial Diversion Program because of improper accounting and because the juvenile probation office did not include the programs in the budget.

"It's not a question of spending money in an unauthorized fashion," explained Chairman Jan Gauger.

"They just couldn't keep track of how the money was spent," said County Clerk Carl Hartman.

One grant was not even shown on any budget and therefore technically can't be spent. Another grant failed to list the local match on the budget.

The Human Services budget was technically halved because the city's contribution was left off budget forms.

The board also increased foster care payments to bring them more in line with similar payments by the Welfare Department and other social service agencies.

Payments for foster children will rise from $100 to $125 per month to $120 to $145 for elementary aged children and $145 to $175 for teenagers.

Firm Says Engineer Wouldn't Take Bids

A local firm has accused County Engineer Marv Nuernberger of not meeting state laws on bidding requirements in a suit filed Monday in Lancaster County District Court.

Schwarck Quarries, Inc., is seeking an injunction barring the county commissioners from approving any more payments on rock crushing and asking that the defendants be forced to pay Lancaster County for any past excessive overpayments.

Engineer Nuernberger made an agreement with Constructors Inc. for rock crushing at the county-owned quarry near Roca about July 25, the petition contends.

This agreement failed to comply with state statutes because sealed bids were not solicited, the bidding was not advertised in a newspaper and the agreement was not approved by the county attorney's office, according to the suit.

The president of Schwarck personally asked for an opportunity to bid on the rock crushing and was denied by Nuernberger, the suit contends.

The suit claims that County Commissioners Jan Gauger and Bruce Hamilton approved a $15,500 bill from Construction, Inc., in October. The two are also named as defendants in the suit.

The suit also contends that the price paid for the rock crushing was "excessive of the fair market value."

A hearing on a temporary injunction has been scheduled for Dec. 11 at 2 p.m.

$280,831 In Back Pay Owed To Nebraskans

Omaha (AP) — U.S. Labor Dept. investigations during the quarter that ended Sept. 30 uncovered $280,831 in back pay owed to 813 Nebraskans whose rights under employment standards laws had been violated, the department said Tuesday.

Frank Gerlach, Omaha area director for the department's Employment Standards Administration, said that of the total discovered, $82,318 actually was recovered for 695 workers, most of it through voluntary payments by employers.

Most of the difference between the amount found due and the amount actually paid back, Gerlach said, still is being sought from employers through negotiation or litigation.

He said violations involving 275 workers were in overtime areas and those involving another 555 workers involved minimum wage standards.

Nebraska's figures compare with $1,589,455 found due to 9,234 workers in the four-state region of Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri. Of that amount, $801,784 has been restored to 7,848 workers. Nationwide, $29,202,029 was found due during the period to 137,810 workers. Of that, $16,511,857 was returned to 106,353 persons.

Second Grief Workshop Will Be Held Nov. 13, 14

The second major grief workshop, entitled "Grief: Letting Go and Reaching Out," will be held Nov. 13 and 14. The two-day seminar is being sponsored by the Lincoln Grief Center.

The workshop's opening session, beginning at 7 p.m. Thursday at the First Plymouth Congregational Church, has been designed as an in-service, experiential seminar for professionals and para-professionals who work with patients facing death.

Chaplain Kermit Smith, M.Div., of Kansas City, Mo., will lead off Friday's seminar, which will begin at 8:30 a.m. at the Westminster Presbyterian Church. Smith will speak on "Dealing With Loss... Our Greatest Threat."

Friday's workshop will also include several small group discussions dealing with various aspects of death and grief, such as "Telling Children About Death," "Adolescence and Grief," "Ministering to Grieving Persons," "Theological Perspectives on Death" and "Alternatives to Traditional Funerals."

Marines Slate Ball In Lincoln On Anniversary

The Lincoln chapter of the Marine Corps League will hold its Marine Corps Ball Saturday night, Nov. 8 at the Lincoln Elks Club.

The ball will be the first since 1973 and will mark the 200th anniversary of the Marine Corps, according to Jim Dier, a spokesman for the league.

Dier urged all former Marines and interested members of the public to call for reservations at 482-4335.

Many former Marines may not be aware of the ball, he said, because a mailing list of former Marines was lost when the Marine Reserve Center in Lincoln closed.

The ball will cost $10 per person and will feature Mrs. Dorcas Cavett, mother of Comedian Dick Cavett and former Marine Corps major, as the speaker.

Group Proposes Banking Overhaul

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sweeping overhaul of the nation's financial institutions was proposed in a House Banking Committee staff study released Tuesday.

The committee plans to begin hearings on the proposals in December.

Committee Chairman Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., and Rep. Ferdinand J. St. Germain, D-R.I., sponsors of the plan, said it would change what they called "artificial and outmoded constraints" to competition and economic growth. They said it also is designed to revive the housing market.

The two have not introduced a formal bill and refer to the proposals as "discussion principles."

The proposals would, in effect, wipe out many distinctions between commercial banks, savings and loan associations, mutual savings banks and credit unions.

All would be able to offer checking accounts or the equivalent and most could have trust departments and other bank services.

Savings and loans, mutual savings banks and credit unions, for instance, would be able to expand their consumer lending, including the ability to issue credit cards and establish revolving lines of credit.

Ceilings on interest rates paid to thrift institution depositors would be lifted, commercial banks could pay interest on checking accounts and consumers would be told by the federal government the varying interest paid on deposits and charged on loans by depository institutions in their area.

All such institutions would be treated equally for tax purposes.

The decline of the housing market several years ago was blamed partly on the rigidity imposed on the thrift institutions' operations. As the cost of credit soared, investors bypassed the thrift institutions which had a federal ceiling on the permissible interest payments. The pool of money for housing loans declined markedly, and when the money became available again, it was at such high interest that many potential buyers stayed away.

The plan to revive the home mortgage industry would include a tax credit for mortgage interest to financial institutions making loans for housing for low and moderate-income buyers or renters.

The two congressmen estimated the cost of the subsidy at $725 million a year.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board also could lend directly to any depository institutions to supplement their mortgage money supply for low and moderate-income housing.

Reuss and St. Germain would consolidate into a single agency the bank examination, supervision and regulatory functions now performed by separate, sometimes overlapping agencies.

The Federal Reserve would be left responsible only for conducting the nation's monetary policy, with a mandate to issue an annual economic forecast.

The Fed's seven-person board of governors would be reduced to five, with terms reduced from 14 to 10 years.

Reuss and St. Germain said balance between independence of the Fed and public accountability has tipped too far toward independence, with the Fed becoming almost a fourth branch of government.

"In its virtually complete control over monetary policies, the Fed can largely offset the effects of fiscal policies determined by democratic process," Reuss and St. Germain said.

The proposals also would strip the 12 regional Federal Reserve banks of regulatory duties, would retire the stock of the reserve banks and would convert the banks to "purely government institutions."

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York would continue to conduct open market operations and foreign exchange activities, with guidance from the Fed board.

The presidents of the reserve banks would be appointed by the President, with confirmation by the Senate, in contrast to the current practice of having the individual directors of each bank choose the chief.

Burns: Fed Keeping To Its Growth Path

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chairman Arthur F. Burns of the Federal Reserve Board told Congress Tuesday the board is keeping to the same money growth path it started on six months ago and claimed that economic developments are proving him right.

Although the Fed has been under pressure to pump more money into the economy to bring down interest rates, Burns said "the only responsible option" is to follow what he described as moderate money policies.

He said the Fed's target is for an annual rate of growth in the money supply of 5 to 7.5% in the next 12 months, the same target as for the past six months.

The money supply Burns referred to is the amount of circulating currency and money in checking accounts.

"We in the Fed have been proved right," Burns told the Senate Banking Committee, indicating he is pleased with the rate of improvement in the economy in recent months.

There were these other economic developments Tuesday:

— Domestic car sales in October were the strongest in 17 months, 23% higher than the year before. All four major companies reported sales up from the recession levels of 1974.

— The Export-Import Bank said its net income declined for the second year in a row last year, forcing it to cut the dividend it pays the Treasury.

Burns said the economy doesn't need the $28 billion in tax reductions President Ford is proposing unless spending reductions occur simultaneously. Ford has proposed Jan. 1 tax cuts, with spending reductions to follow on Oct. 1.

"I was not enthusiastic about a tax cut in the first place," said Burns. "In an economy our size, I don't think it makes much difference."

He acknowledged the nation is still a long way from "reasonably full employment of our labor and capital resources," but said any greater money growth above what the Fed is now projecting could set off new inflation with even more serious economic consequences.

While inflation has been reduced, he said, its pace has quickened in recent months, serving "a clear warning that our long-range problem of inflation is unsolved and remains a threat to continuance of economic recovery."

"In light of these facts, the only responsible option open to the Federal Reserve is to pursue a course of moderation in monetary policy — a course that will provide expansion in supplies of money and credit adequate to facilitate further good recovery of production and employment, but not so large as to rekindle the fires of inflation," he said.

Burns is required by law to report each six months to the House and Senate Banking committees on the Fed's money targets for the following year.

GAO Officials Will Brief Ag Panel On Grain Probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — A team of General Accounting Office investigators will brief members of the House Agriculture Committee behind closed doors Wednesday on their preliminary findings from a probe of the nation's grain inspection system.

Congressional aides attending a similarly informal briefing Monday for staff members said Tuesday that the investigators reported that 30% of the inspections by federal employees may not have been accurately performed. They also reportedly said that private inspectors under Agriculture Department contracts lack sufficient supervision by the federal employees and the entire system of grain inspection, weighing and grading "is typified by poor control."

The committee is in the process of drafting legislation designed to correct abuses of the system which have led in the last 15 months to almost 100 indictments of employees and firms at ports and inland grain centers.

When it meets again formally on Friday, a spokesman said, it will have before it two bills.

The Ford administration proposal calls for beefing up the present supervisory force and imposing new ethical codes.

Iowa Democratic Rep. Neal Smith's wide-ranging bill would remove industry involvement in policing the grain.

Women Writers Out In Open Now

By CYNTHIA JOHNSON
Star Staff Writer

Although women writers no longer feel compelled to hide their manuscripts in closets (or under tablecloths as Jane Austen reportedly did), they're not getting the support they need from readers and publishers, according to several women writers who took part in a panel discussion Tuesday at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

"We are dependent on women starting publishing companies," said playwright Megan Terry of Omaha. The "situation in New York publishing circles" is "desperate" — especially for poets and playwrights, she continued.

Feminist radio stations, record companies and publishing companies "help us bring our information to each other," said Judith Katz of Omaha.

Yet, despite the shortage of publishing opportunities, the five members of the Student Y-sponsored Women Speak '75 panel on "Woman As Writer" agreed that women writers are more visible than in the past.

Even as far back as the Middle Ages, women were writing, said panelist Moira Ferguson. But "because of our exclusion from public life," women's writing has "tended to be private."

Women's writing expressed itself mainly in diaries and letters until the 19th century produced female writers such as Jane Austen, the Brontes, and George Eliot (Mary Anne Evans).

"We came into our own in fiction" during the 19th century, Ms. Ferguson said. And that despite the fact that it was still "not kosher to be a woman writer — especially if you weren't a mother. It simply was not ladylike."

The "traditional way women have been viewed in society" — as daughters, wives, mothers — forced most women to hide the fact that they wrote, Ms. Ferguson said.

In addition, there was an "insecurity about whether what you (women) had to say was valid," Ms. Katz said.

This tendency towards "closet writing" continued even into the 1950's when what Ms. Ferguson termed the "cult of motherhood, patriotism and apple pie" prevailed.

However, during the 1960's, as protesters began to question traditional cultural values, women writers began stepping forward in ever-increasing numbers.

"Every imaginable genre is now within our embrace," Ms. Ferguson said.

"I don't see any fear" among women who are writing today, Ms. Katz said. "Nobody's holding back any information."

The "most exciting" aspect of current women's writing according to Ms. Katz, is the "breaking of forms." Women writers no longer "have to accept male criteria" for literary structure and subject matter, she said.

Board Of Equalization To Meet On Setting Future Tax Rates

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

The state's tax-setter, the Board of Equalization, will meet next Monday to settle two thorny questions to what future commitments it must consider in setting the tax rates.

The board will then meet on Nov. 15 to set the 1976 state sales and income tax rates.

All totaled, Peters said, there will be 540 possible combinations of factors the board can use to decide future obligations.

The prime question surrounds the impact the method of determining future obligations will have upon tax rates.

State senators have contended the state would not now be in its current monetary straits had the board followed a 1971 law requiring it to consider future obligations.

Peters could not say for certain Tuesday whether the situation would force a hike in the sales and income tax rates.

The presumption has been they would.

The meeting Monday will be conducted as a public hearing, Peters said, adding he hopes senators who have been critical of him and Gov. J. James Exon will appear to express their views on what these future obligations are.

The meeting is scheduled for 10 a.m. in the Governor's Hearing Room at the capital.

Peters has indicated he delayed proposing rules for the board to follow in considering future, or express, obligations because he was not sure what the term means.

Most officials agree that reimbursement to counties for personal property tax exemptions and contracts for future construction projects are express obligations.

Peters has questioned whether the term is so inclusive that the board will have to consider

CTU Cites Two For Saving Life

Two Lincoln Cengas employees are the first recipients of the Central Telephone & Utilities Corp. Humanitarian Award, which was given to them Tuesday during ceremonies at the Nebraska Club.

Serviceman Robert J. Muhle and apprentice serviceman Stuart Burdorf were recognized for saving the life of fellow employee George Schafer on June 24, while the three men were working on an installation.

According to Lincoln Cengas Division Service Manager Bill Lucke, Muhle and Burdorf applied mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and heart massage to Schafer after he collapsed with a heart attack.

Both Muhle and Burdorf attended a two-hour Cengassponsored school covering mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and heart massage only two weeks before Schafer collapsed. Muhle has been employed by Cengas in the service department since May 1960, and Burdorf joined Cengas in August 1972, as a meter reader. The Humanitarian Award was established in 1974 to recognize employees who respond to emergency situations either on the job or off, said Glenn Bonacker, Cengas vice-president.

Denney Drops More Charges

Omaha (AP) — "We are very pleased," said attorney Arthur O'Leary Tuesday after a federal court judge dismissed conspiracy and a large number of fraud charges filed against his client, American Beef Packers, Inc. (ABP) President Frank R. West.

However, O'Leary said he was disappointed that U.S. District Court Judge Robert V. Denney did not dismiss 25 of the charges contained in the original 105-count indictment, which was returned against West, his top aide, Robert E. Lee, ABP, and its subsidiary, Beefland International, Inc., of Council Bluffs, Iowa.

West and Lee allegedly entered with other unindicted co-conspirators into an elaborate scheme to defraud Midwest livestock raisers, ABP creditors and stockholders of more than $20-million in money, livestock and other goods.

ABP and Beefland were charged with 104 counts of fraud by mail, wire and the causing of stolen or fraudulently obtained goods to be transported in interstate commerce.

The conspiracy, according to the government, culminated last Jan. 7, when American Beef and Beefland filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy.

On Oct. 29, Denney dismissed all of the charges against Lee, saying government attorneys did not sufficiently link Lee to the conspiracy.

Tuesday, Denney gave similar reasons when he dismissed a total of 80 counts against West, all of the charges against Beefland, and 68 of the counts against American Beef. American Beef still faces 36 separate counts which remain from the original indictment.

Asst. U.S. Attys. Michael Schlerch and Thomas Thalken, who shared in the prosecution, obviously were disappointed by the rulings, but had "no comment" when questioned by newsmen.

"I could tell you the same thing Bob Lee did, 'I'm innocent,'" said West after the decision, adding that he would not make a formal statement until Denney renders his verdicts on the remaining charges.

Denney gave attorneys for both sides a total of 50 days to submit final written arguments and rebuttals and said he would rule within 10 days after that.

Denney said he dismissed all of the charges against Beefland because the firm is a wholly-owned subsidiary and "ABP is the true defendant in this case."

Denney, who heard the three-week case without a jury, complimented both sides in the presentation of the case, but he

Gillette Co. To Move Employees

Norfolk (UPI) — Officials of the Gillette Dairy Co., whose Norfolk Bottling Plant was gutted by fire Sunday, said Tuesday the 150 employees will be put to work at other plants in the Midwest.

They said half the work force would be employed at delivery operations at other distribution areas in Nebraska, South Dakota, Iowa and Wyoming and the balance will be transferred to the Gillette Dairy Plant in Rapid City, S.D.

Officials said production at the Rapid City plant will be increased in order to avoid a shortage of products in Nebraska.

The fire burned out of control for four hours. The metal roof and walls at the west end of the concrete and metal building collapsed. An equipment room located on the east side of the building apparently was salvaged.

A company spokesman said the plant's computerized processing equipment was located in the east end of the building and the damage will be assessed to determine how soon the plant can be reopened. However, he said it would be at least 30 days before production could resume.

In addition to processing plants at Norfolk and Rapid City, Gillette's distribution centers outside Nebraska are located in Sioux City, Iowa, Gillette, Wyo., and Yankton, Chamberlain and Pierre in South Dakota.

Largest Cotton Farm Is British

Scott, Miss. (UPI) — The largest and most modern cotton plantation in the world is located in this small Mississippi town.

The Delta and Pine Land Co., a British firm, owns the 28,000-acre farm which has its own hospital and churches.

termed the 105-count indictment a "shotgun approach," and said it would have been almost impossible to select a jury to hear the case. If a jury could have been picked, Denney said, it might have taken the panel "until Christmas" to finish.

Denney based his decision to dismiss charges against West and American Beef on the belief that government attorneys failed to prove the "essential elements of the case . . . beyond a reasonable doubt. There was not enough evidence for me to even consider them."

However, Denney said the remaining charges are "substantive."

Most of the charges remaining against ABP, and all of those against West, involve fraud by mail and wire. They deal with specific instances included in the government's allegations that as part of the scheme, American Beef officials diverted funds from their largest creditor and mainline source of financing, General Electric Credit Corp. (GECC) of Stamford, Conn.

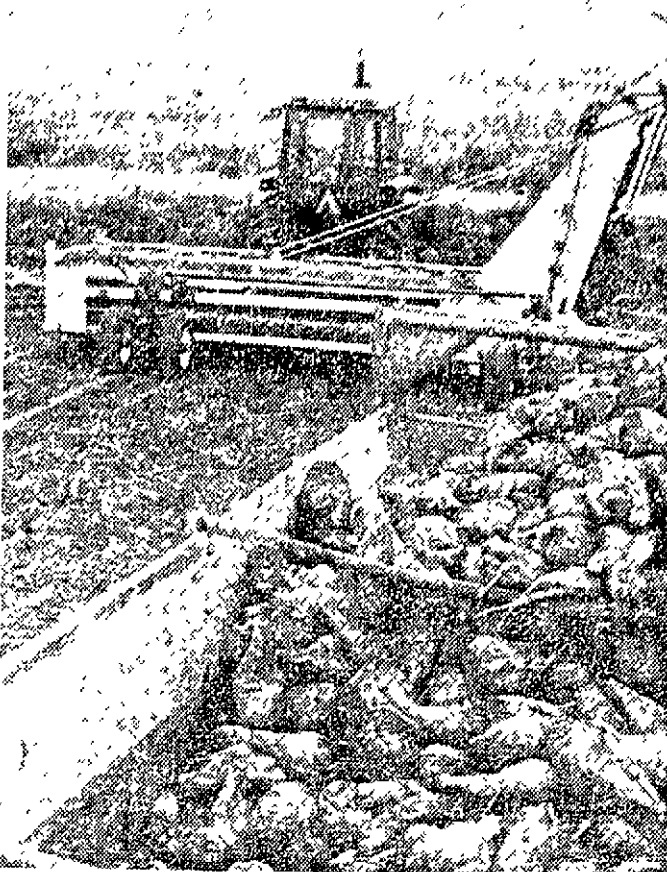

Under the financial arrangements between the two firms, GECC held a lien on the majority of ABP accounts receivable, which were used as security for the daily operating advances GECC made to American Beef.

However, according to several witnesses, ABP officials occasionally called larger customers, and asked them to wire or mail their payments directly to ABP.

The practice became more frequent in the months during the summer and fall of last year, according to former ABP officials who testified during the trial, until GECC became aware of the diversions last Dec. 13.

West said he learned of the diversions the same day as did GECC, but his testimony conflicted with that of James A. Taphorn, a former ABP vice president of finance. Taphorn said he discussed the diversions with West as early as the summer of 1973.

Also remaining against American Beef is one count alleging the firm transported in interstate commerce from Sidney, Neb., to Ft. Morgan, Colo., livestock valued at $5,000 or more, "knowing the same to have been stolen, converted and taken by fraud," according to the indictment.

6-ROW DIGGER . . . got limited use.

Warmth Hinders Beet Harvesting

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau
McCook — While the unseasonably temperate weather has expedited most harvesting on the state, not so sugar beets.

The rapid deterioration of that crop at warm temperatures prompted an unusual limitation on many western Nebraska farmers digging the beets. It was especially frustrating for Emil Fritz, one of two Red Willow County farmers in the beet business.

The 40-year-old farmer had just invested in a six-row digger, believed only the second in the state, with a harvest capability of some 800 tons per day. But the lengthy Indian summer forced his buyer, the Great Western processing plant of Fort Morgan, Colo., to limit its daily purchases.

Like many other Nebraska growers, Fritz and the neighboring Driitwood Farms, Inc. were allowed to dig only 5½% of their total acreage each day of a three-week harvest. With his new digger going at some 150 tons per hour, that meant his 12-truck harvest operation could work only four hours per day.

"Just before we finished, the weather cooled enough that the restriction was finally lifted," said the farmer. "We got in two full days and that did it. Now we've turned to our corn."

Fritz described this year's crop as "pretty good overall," with a yield of about 18 tons per acre and sugar content of 14-15%.

At the eastern edge of Nebraska's beet growing area, the two Red Willow farmers together shipped close to 300 rail carloads out of McCook.

Fritz, incidentally, is a relative newcomer to beet farming here which dates "way back to the days of teams and wagons." He began his beet growing in 1961.

Dawson Team To Chicago

Lexington (UPI) — The Dawson County 4-H meats team will represent Nebraska in the National Meats Judging Contest to be held in Kansas City, Nov. 12.

The judging contest will be held in conjunction with the 77th annual American Royal Livestock Show.

The team members making the trip will include Roz Buddenberg of Gothenburg, Steve Gierhan of Lexington, Tim Matthies of Gothenburg and Deb Pedersen of Lexington.

Plymouth Producer Is Pork All-American

Columbus — When Gale Pohlman came back home from college in 1970 and moved to his grandfather's farm near Plymouth, the only facility for raising hogs was the old horsebarn.

In partnership with his father, he has since expanded those facilities to a commercial farrow-to-finish operation that turns out over 1,000 market hogs per year.

For his progressiveness as a swine producer and his leadership in local and state pork producer organizations, Pohlman was announced

Nebraska Pork All-American at the annual banquet of the Nebraska Pork Producers and Porkettes here Tuesday.

Also honored at the banquet were the Cuming County Pork Producers, capturing the top area group award. Two of its members received individual honors.

Two of three Pork Chop Awards for outstanding commercial pork production went to Kenneth Schoch of Bancroft, secretary of the Cuming County group, and Norbert Steffensmeier of Dodge, one of the association's directors.

Receiving the Builder Award for purebred production was Darrell G. Epp of Henderson, a Central Nebraska Pork Producer Association member. The Booster Award for a non-producer supporting the pork industry was claimed by Bill Ahlschwede, University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension swine specialist.

Winning the top award and $300 from Behlen Manufacturing Company of Columbus was James Meiergerd, 18-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Gottfried Meiergerd of West Point. Another Meiergerd, Dan, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Meiergerd of Dodge, won the award last year.

Sharing the outstanding young pork producer runner-up title were Larry Naber, 18-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Naber of Utica; and Gordon Ganz, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ganz of Alvo. Both received $250.

Mrs. Porkette From Beatrice

Columbus — Cindy Clifford of Beatrice was honored as Mrs. Nebraska Porkette by members of the Nebraska Pork Producers and Porkettes at their annual banquet here Tuesday.

Mrs. Clifford, in her second and final year as state president of the Porkettes, was presented the award for outstanding leadership.

The Nebraska Porkettes also handed out an award to Sue Baumann of Howells for presenting the top 4-H demonstration featuring pork at the 1975 Nebraska State Fair.

Varner For Honoring Commitment To SeTech

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

University of Nebraska President D. B. Varner said Tuesday his personal recommendation will be "to honor our obligation, without qualification," to Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College in helping it acquire defunct Pershing College in Beatrice.

The NU Board of Regents on Friday will consider a resolution which would reject its acquisition of Pershing and suggest that the NU Foundation liquidate its ownership of the campus.

Varner said, "The foundation drafted the resolution" and requested that it be presented to regents.

While Varner hasn't conferred with the NU Foundation executive committee, he said, "I can appreciate fully their concern about what they believe to be fulfilling their responsibilities" in timely disposition of Pershing.

"Proposal Made"

"My own position," Varner said, "is that we have made a proposal to Southeast Community College in response to some indication they would like to establish a campus in those (Pershing) facilities.

"And we have said if that's what you really want to do, we will help try to transfer that property to you." The foundation has decided it legally may only benefit NU, thus may award the Pershing only to the regents.

Based on SeTech's affirmative position to seek Pershing, Varner said, "I find no reason for the university to hold to any other position than its original (one)."

"If Southeast Community College has some productive use for these facilities, then we should try to help them achieve that," the president said.

Legal Complications

Noting "some legal obstacles which complicate this very substantially," Varner said if regents decide to acquire Pershing temporarily, "I suppose that no action can be taken until the Legislature is back in session, and until they either agree or disagree" on the proposed campus title transfer to SeTech.

"Meanwhile," Varner said, "the foundation is placed in an awful position, in that their hands are tied in making some appropriate disposal of the property. And they would like to get that resolved," to avoid further expenses on the non-income-generating campus.

"I'm still looking for some solution to this property," Varner said, one to "accommodate the original objectives."

But "The Board of Regents may take a different view, and the foundation obviously can do what they want to" with Pershing.

Lincoln Regent Edward Schwartzkopf said Tuesday, "My position at this point would be that I'd vote against the resolution."

'Kind Of Commitment'

Schwartzkopf explained, "We kind of made a commitment (to SeTech), and we need at least to try and work out all possible details" to honor it.

He said regents also made a commitment to Beatrice citizens, by considering uses for Pershing that led to the foundation taking ownership. Those moves were made "in good faith," Schwartzkopf said, and Beatrice residents "had an understanding that something would be moving into this facility that would be an asset to the community."

Regent Kermit Hansen of Omaha said Tuesday, "I haven't had a chance" to read the resolution, and didn't know yet how he'll vote Friday.

Noting the proposals between SeTech, NU and the foundation, Hansen said his position is that "we do have an agreement" and if Pershing "isn't our property, we ought to urge" a disposition of it for SeTech.

"The biggest thing," said Regents Vice Chairman Robert Prokop, "is the legality of the move with Southeast Tech." If NU has no use for Pershing, he said, regents ought to consider giving it back to the donor in Beatrice.

Dr. Prokop, of Wilber, said he'll probably "vote to take it (Pershing) from the foundation," if that were proposed. However, "I'm not prepared" to pass title to SeTech "until they know what they have in mind" as a use, and resolve the issue in Fairbury.

"I hope they (SeTech) don't close down that school in Fairbury," Dr. Prokop said, noting the 34-year local support in the "city project." He cited another worry that "maybe the Southeast Tech people are going to shut that (Fairbury campus down anyway," even if the college doesn't acquire Pershing.

Dr. Prokop said establishing an agricultural extension station or veterinary science complex at Pershing "would help out southeast Nebraska a tremendous amount."

Dr. Robert Koefoot, regent from Grand Island, said he didn't know yet how he will vote. But he said if SeTech has a use for Pershing, "that should be settled locally."

Dr. Koefoot said if the foundation, SeTech and leaders from Fairbury and Beatrice would meet and decide "what's best for our students rather than what's best for the community, they might come up with a common denominator."

Closing Down Fairbury Said Not Board Stance

"As long as we have a viable program at Fairbury and maintain a reasonable enrollment," Robert S. Eicher said, "then there's justification for the campus to exist."

The area president of Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College (SeTech) pointed out that "Our board has not taken the position of wanting to close Fairbury" as an independent move.

Rather, Dr. Eicher said, the campus would have been phased out only if the SeTech board had negotiated an agreement to acquire Pershing College in Beatrice as a substitute.

But if University of Nebraska Regents on Friday decide not to accept Pershing from the NU Foundation, thus rejecting transfer of the campus to SeTech, the community college can't afford to buy it.

Although the Fairbury campus' continued operation then would appear more certain, Eicher said, "We still have to resolve the dormitory problem." The $543,000 dorm bond obligation is in default.

Eicher said even with the recent dorm remodeling to accommodate use by Fairbury faculty and SeTech paying rent, the college still "won't meet the total (annual) obligation" of $32,000.

The dormitory is about 60% vacant, causing the revenue shortfall.

Eicher also noted the SeTech board had agreed informally that if it were to "spend a great deal of money, perhaps priority should be put on the facility here in Lincoln." That SeTech campuses consist of scattered, leased sites.

SeTech Board Members Eye Passage Of Regents Resolution

By Southeast Nebraska Bureau

"I'm certain of this, if Pershing College is out of reach of acquisition by the Southeast Community College (SeTech), we still have to deal with the question of adequately serving southeast Nebraska, at the right place and with the right services," a SeTech board member said Tuesday.

Don Nielsen of Lincoln was responding to a resolution to be considered by the University of Nebraska Regents Friday that would liquidate the Pershing College property at Beatrice.

Pershing College was given to the NU Foundation last fall. It had been offered to SeTech for minimal lease or gift provisions.

It was under those provisions that the SeTech board passed a resolution that steps be taken to acquire Pershing College and close the campus at Fairbury.

Nielsen said that even if the NU no-gift resolution passes, Beatrice is still a better location to serve people than Fairbury is. It will also reopen the question of whether the Fairbury campus should be beefed up with a changed emphasis to more vocational-technical orientation, Nielsen said.

Ted Doyle, SeTech board member from Fairbury, said he never had much hopes of acquiring the Pershing campus for SeTech use. He has been opposed to closing the Fairbury campus.

"The whole thing has been too indefinite all the way," Doyle said. Doyle also believed even with Pershing coming as a gift or with minimal lease provisions it might have been financially unmanageable for SeTech.

Doyle said the renovation and upkeep estimates on Pershing were very conservative and were considerably more than maintaining the Fairbury campus. "The whole system needs to be looked at," Doyle said.

Fletcher Peters of Fairbury, who filed a suit to block acquisition of the Pershing Campus, said the economic pinch the whole state is in as well as SeTech makes it "indiscernible" to consider acquisition of Pershing.

SeTech "is not in a position to buy in with or without my suit," Peters said.

Jack Quackenbush of Beatrice, administrator of the Scully estate, which gave Pershing College to the NU Foundation, said any questions regarding the Regents proposed resolution were premature.

"They haven't passed it yet. The presumption that they will pass it is not true," Quackenbush said.

Critical of the media, Quackenbush said newspapers are always making Fairbury and Beatrice out to be competitors over this issue.

"We've got a fine facility. Fairbury needs it. Now let's get a positive article about that for a change," Quackenbush said.

The proposed resolution takes the position that the NU Foundation cannot give Pershing College to anyone but NU.

Since it will not be used by NU in the immediate future and since there is substantial cost in maintaining the property, the resolution suggests that the foundation put the property on the market. Insurance appraisers put the property's value at $3.1 million.

The foundation first offered it to SeTech for $35,800 to cover insurance and other costs.

NU School May Lose Its Status

Omaha (AP) — A loss of accreditation could hurt the University of Nebraska Graduate School of Social Work, but it wouldn't necessarily mean a closing of the school, according to one university official.

The threat to withdraw the accreditation is being made by the Commission on Accreditation, and a hearing on the subject is slated in New York City, Nov. 11.

The commission threat is based on alleged problems at the school, including a lack of fiscal support from the university, a lack of adequate faculty resources, a lack of leadership continuity, a lack of faculty cohesiveness and other problems caused by having programs in both Omaha and Lincoln.

Dr. Dean Woody, dean of graduate studies and research at the University of Nebraska at Omaha, said there are drawbacks to the operation of a non-accredited school of social work.

According to Woody, non-accredited schools are not eligible for federal funds, and its graduates can't get certain types of professional certifications.

Instead of discussing the possible consequences of losing accreditation, Woody said officials have been trying to improve the situation so the accreditation will be continued. One of the improvements is a plan to move all of the programs to UNO, Woody said.

Loss of accreditation would mean greater problems in recruiting and higher personnel costs for agencies, especially outside the Omaha and Lincoln areas, said Woody, adding that training for current agency workers would suffer, and that the school's outstate program, would be cut back.

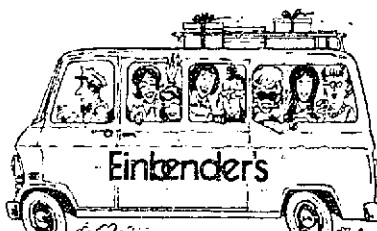

Currently, faculty members in the school teach graduate courses in North Platte, Scottsbluff, Columbus, Grand Island and Beatrice. About 200 students are annually enrolled in the outstate classes.

Mankiewicz Predicts Ford To Lose

Omaha (AP) — Political journalist Frank Mankiewicz predicted Monday that President Ford would not win the Republican presidential nomination next year.

Mankiewicz was involved with the campaigns of the late Robert Kennedy and Sen. George McGovern. He also is former director of the Peace Corps.

Mankiewicz appeared at a news conference with Hunter S.

Thompson, a political writer for Rolling Stone magazine. They were in Omaha to speak at the University of Nebraska at Omaha.

Mankiewicz said Vice President Rockefeller's announcement that he wouldn't be Ford's running mate would hurt the chances of former California Gov. Ronald Reagan.

"A hatred of Rockefeller was one of the unifying factors of the Reagan supporters," he said.

Mankiewicz said Reagan still would be strong enough to defeat Ford in the New Hampshire and Florida primaries next spring. He said these defeats probably would remove Ford as one of the top contenders and make the Republican nomination "a wide open race."

But Mankiewicz said Reagan probably wouldn't win the nomination.

"I think most Republicans will realize that the polls show Reagan can not be elected. They probably will turn to a more moderate candidate, like maybe Sen. Howard Baker," he said.

Mankiewicz said that any of the Democratic candidates could defeat Ford. He described Ford as "a very weak President."

"The Democratic Party could tear itself apart, however," Mankiewicz said. "It has had great skill at finding the one issue they can lose with, but I don't think they will."

He said if Sen. Edward Kennedy decided to run, he could win the Democratic nomination and be elected president.

"But he's a young man," Mankiewicz said. "He could run as late as 1988 and still be the youngest president since John F. Kennedy."

Assessor From Perkins County Buried Monday

Grant — Funeral services were held here Monday for Mrs. Valera Beckler, 66, Perkins County assessor who died Friday.

Mrs. Beckler was appointed county assessor in 1973 to fill a vacancy and was elected to the post in 1974. She and her husband, Hugo, residents of the Grant area for 45 years, were in the car and implement business.

Surviving in addition to her husband are her daughter, Mrs. Jack (Donna) Holaway of Grant; son, Bill, also of Grant; sister, Mrs. Morna Kays of Ogallala; and seven grandchildren.

Rockefeller Told Hruska First

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Roman Hruska, R-Neb., inadvertently was the first member of Congress to hear face to face from Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller that he had withdrawn himself from considerations as President Ford's running mate next year, an aide said Tuesday.

Hruska, ranking minority member of the Senate Judiciary Committee that Rockefeller appeared before a year ago for confirmation hearings, was at the White House Monday morning for a ceremony at which Ford was autographing footballs for a Nebraska charity.

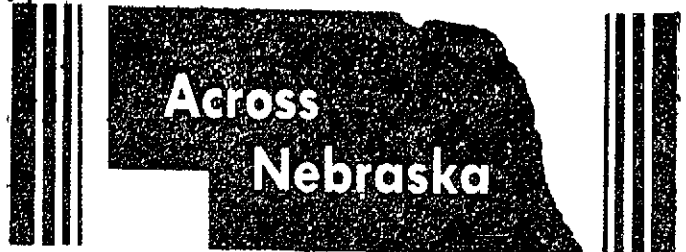

The senator said he passed Rockefeller in an office, talking on the telephone, when the vice president waved him in to show him the letter to Ford formalizing his decision.

When he got to the ceremony, shortly before the Rockefeller letter was made public, Hruska also was told about it by Ford," he said.

Rockefeller had called the Senate and House leadership to inform them of his plans.

Ex-Publisher Chosen As County Sheriff

Tryon (AP) — Don Nicholson, Tryon businessman and former newspaper publisher, has been appointed McPherson County sheriff. He was named to succeed Sheriff Gordon Bassett, who resigned. Nicholson will fill the unexpired term running to January of 1979.

Benedict School Addition Proposed

Benedict (AP) — Voters in the Benedict school district will go to the polls Nov. 25 to vote on a $650,000 bond issue for construction of an addition to the present school house. The proposed addition would include a gymnasium and lockers, home economics space and a combination music stage area.

More Disaster Claims Filed

Elkhorn (AP) — An additional 44 disaster claims have been filed on drought-stricken corn and milo crops in Douglas County in the past two weeks. Gerald A. Bremer, executive director of the Douglas County Agricultural Stabilization Service here, said claims in Douglas County total 106. It will not be known whether payments will be made on those claims until supporting evidence is furnished, Bremer said.

NU Team To Compete At Royal Show

Members of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln varsity livestock judging team will be traveling to Kansas City, Mo., to compete Saturday in an intercollegiate livestock judging contest held in connection with the American Royal Livestock Show. Team coach R. B. Warren, an NU animal science professor, said the following students make up the American Royal team: Dick Wilson of Kearney, Brian Thompson of Flats, Dave Lamb of Anselmo, Mike Treffer of Broken Bow and Delton Barr of Liberty. Alternates include Andrea Roberts of Lincoln, Steve Betka of Fairmont and Boyd Strope of Orchard.

Ex-Penitentiary Officer Is Killed In Tennessee

A former corrections officer at the State Penitentiary in Lincoln was killed Friday night in an automobile accident in Covington, Tenn.

Michael W. Erwin, 26, employed in the sheriff's department in Covington after leaving Lincoln earlier this year, died when a truck rammed into his patrol car while he was using the radio.

Erwin had pulled over another car on the road, and both of them were parked on the shoulder when the truck hit. Two other persons were killed in the accident.

Survivors include his wife, the former Sheila Kraus of Lincoln; their one-year-old daughter, Stacey Rae; his mother, Mrs. Marshall Townsend, and his father, Wilson Erwin, all of Covington.

Services were held Sunday in Covington, with burial at Shiloh Cemetery there.

2 Democrats In Trouble Over Busing Re-Elected

By The Associated Press

Gov Julian M. Carroll of Kentucky and Mayor Kevin H. White of Boston, two Democrats considered in electoral danger because of controversies stemming from court-ordered school busing, won new terms Tuesday night.

And in Mississippi, Democrat Chiff Finch, a 48-year-old attorney, regained the lead from Republican businessman Gil Carmichael, who was seeking to end a century of Democratic dominance in the Deep South state.

A victory by Finch would enable the Democrats to maintain the 36-13 margin they now hold over the Republicans in the nation's governorships.

As the nation conducted scattered off-year balloting, both Kentucky and Mississippi elected female lieutenant governors, joining New York as the only states with women elected to their second highest offices.

And the night's victors — a year before the nation picks its next president — included Mayors Ralph Perk of Cleveland and Frank Rizzo of Philadelphia. In Minneapolis, Mayor Albert Hofstede was upset by the former mayor he beat two years ago, one-time policeman Charles Stenwig.

In both contests, the two candidates were in general agreement on the local racial controversies. In Kentucky, Carroll and Gable both denounced Louisville's court-ordered school busing plan, while in Boston, White and Timilty criticized busing orders but urged that the law be obeyed.

However, backers of Carroll and White feared they could be hurt by any anti-incumbent backlash.

But the fears proved groundless in Kentucky as Carroll ran strongly in normally Democratic rural areas and did well enough against his wealthy 41-year-old opponent in Republican Jefferson County to win a decisive victory.

He was joined in victory by his Democratic running mate, Thelma Stovall, who defeated her male Republican opponent, Shirley Palmer-Ball, to become the state's first woman lieutenant governor.

In Mississippi, too, a woman also captured the state's No. 2 post as veteran Democrat Evelyn Ganoy, now the state's Insurance commissioner, held a strong lead over Republican Mayor Bill Patrick of Laurel. Only New York had a female lieutenant governor before Tuesday's balloting.

In most major municipal elections, incumbent mayors were re-elected.

In Philadelphia, controversial law-and-order Mayor Rizzo won easily over two opponents, while in Baltimore and Miami, Mayors William Donald Schaefer and Maurice Ferre also scored easy wins.

In Indianapolis, where Republican Mayor Richard G. Lugar is retiring, GOP candidate William Hudnut, a former congressman, defeated Democratic businessman Robert Welch.

In Boston, the contest was close between the 46-year-old White and his opponent, 37-year-old state Sen. Joseph Timilty, before the mayor finally captured his third four-year term by a 10,000-vote margin.

In Houston, Mayor Fred Hofheinz held the early lead over four opponents.

In Cleveland, counting in the contest between Mayor Ralph Perk, a white Republican, and Arnold Pinkney, a black Democrat, was delayed by a computer breakdown.

Owen To Head Campaign

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (AP) — The decision by Vice President Nelson Rockefeller not to seek another term will help President Ford, former Lt. Gov. David C. Owen said Tuesday after he was named to direct Ford's election campaign in seven Midwestern states.

"Personally, I believe Rockefeller leaving the ticket is good as far as the people in the region I'll serve are concerned," said Owen, 36, who did not seek reelection when his term as lieutenant governor expired last year.

"I believe someone with a more conservative leaning would probably add to the ticket, and hopefully someone from the Midwest would be considered. I think Rockefeller leaving the ticket is a plus in this area," Owen said.

The President Ford Committee announced in Washington Tuesday that Owen would be the regional director for Kansas, Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota, Missouri, North Dakota and South Dakota.

Owen, chairman and president of the First National Bank of Shawnee Mission, said there was still one hitch in his acceptance of the campaign job that will have to be worked out with the Federal Elections Commission. He expressed confidence, however, that there would be no problem and said he wanted the post "because I think I could do a very good job of it."

Owen said the Ford committee still must get approval from the elections commission to reimburse his bank for the time he spends away from the bank.

"Otherwise, it could be construed as a corporate contribution," he said. "The other way would be for me to quit my present job, and I'm not able to do that."

Owen, who headed the successful re-election campaign of Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., last year, said he felt certain former Gov. Ronald Reagan of California would seek the GOP presidential nomination "and will be a formidable opponent." He added:

"I believe the President has a good record and when it comes convention time the people will go with the incumbent."

Big Bond Issues Lose In Three States

By The Associated Press

With New York City fighting to avoid default on billions of dollars in bonds, voters in Ohio, New Jersey and New York state rejected bond issues. Included was the largest state bond issue in US history.

Maine and Pennsylvania voters approved smaller bond issues.

In New Jersey, where voters turned down $922 million in bond issues, Democratic Gov. Brendan T. Byrne blamed New York City's fiscal problems and the Ford administration's reaction to the city's difficulties for the defeat of the bond issues.

"President Ford's harsh treatment of the New York problem has clearly destroyed voter confidence in government borrowing of all kinds," he said.

In Ohio, the biggest bond issue, a $4.5 billion program that Republican Gov. James A. Rhodes proposed to revitalize the state's economy, was defeated by a margin of up to 4 to 1.

"The people of Ohio have spoken, and I will abide by their decision," Rhodes told reporters in conceding defeat for the package.

Rhodes had boosted his "Blueprint for Ohio" as a way to lead the state out of recession and toward economic recovery.

The Ohio package included a tax abatement for new industry, a $175 billion bond issue for transportation projects, a state-assisted housing program and a $275 billion bond issue for capital improvements and city aid.

Opponents called the plan ill-conceived and fiscally unsound.

In New Jersey, voters rejected bond issues totaling almost $1 billion. The biggest package was $600 million for mass transit and highways.

The rest of the money was in three issues for institutions, sewer and water improvements and low rent housing.

New York state voters rejected by a 3 to 1 margin a $250 million bond issue for 9,000 low-rent apartment units for the elderly.

Pennsylvania voters overwhelmingly approved a $10 million bond issue that would provide low interest loans to the state's financially pressed volunteer fire companies.

Maine voters approved a $900,000 bond issue for improvements at the 78-year-old dormitory building at the state university at Gorham. Also approved was a $13.6 million bond issue for road and bridge construction throughout the state. Both passed easily.

New York, New Jersey Defeat Rights Amendments

By The Associated Press

Constitutional amendments to make men and women equal in the eyes of the law in New York and New Jersey were defeated by voters Tuesday.

Leaders in the women's rights movement had hoped for a strong showing in both states, particularly New York, as a boost to the drive for a similar amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

A strong opposition vote from upstate appeared to be the key factor in defeat of the equal rights proposal in New York. New York City's voters favored it.

With 29% of New York's election districts reporting, it was 513,481 against the amendment, 353,133 for it.

In New Jersey, with 80% of the state's precincts counted, it was 625,851 for the equal rights amendment, 652,500 opposed.

Legislatures in both states have approved the amendment to the U.S. Constitution, which needs ratification by March 1979, from four more states for adoption.

Brown's Unorthodox Realism Winning Support

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. is winning broad public approval in California with an unorthodox politics of pessimism and a rejection of the traditional role of governors.

Brown's message is that things are getting worse every day, and that he can't do much about it. He says he's trying to make people face reality, reject a preoccupation with material possessions and work harder to get less in return.

His style is described even by some friends and supporters as abrasive and brusque. Foes call him arrogant, calculating and cold.

The 37-year-old Democrat, known as Jerry, has scrapped gubernatorial protocol, angered state and national leaders of his party and made himself a symbol of antipolitics, 1975 style.

He rejected the mansion, limousines and executive jet that go with the job. His personal schedule is chaotic. His working hours are long and unpredictable. He makes few promises for speeches or appointments with more than a day's notice.

But Brown likes to drop in unannounced at public events or in state offices. And telephone calls from the governor at midnight — or even 2 a.m. — are reported by people involved in issues that catch Brown's personal attention.

Brown has stunned the liberals who helped elect him last year with a tighter budget than his conservative Republican predecessor, Ronald Reagan. And he has annoyed conservatives by giving top state jobs to people they consider ultraliberal or radical.

But after just a few months in office, the intense, serious-minded bachelor is enjoying the greatest personal popularity of any California governor in modern times.

Several national publications and columnists now are touting him as a dark horse Democratic candidate for president in 1976. That's a role Brown says he is not thinking about. But he does not reject it either.

Mervin Field's California Poll says the ratio of approval over disapproval of Brown among Californians is 75 to 7 with the remainder undecided. Field says that's the highest approval rate in the history of polling in California. But last November, Brown was elected governor by the narrowest margin in generations, just 2.3 per cent.

He was front-runner from the day he entered the race, due largely to name identification with his father, Edmund G. "Pat" Brown, who was governor from 1959 through 1966.

By avoiding controversial stands, Brown lost his commanding lead in polls. He squeaked through to a 178,694-vote victory in a state in which Democrats have a 2.1 million voter registration edge.

But as governor, Brown quickly struck out to make his own mark, different from his father's.

The father is an amiable, hand-shaking, back-slapping politician who advocated progress, growth and new programs.

The son is aloof, serious minded, disdainful of much of the politics he grew up with.

The younger Brown says many of the social programs liberals supported in the last decade have failed and should be abandoned.

"We have got to learn you don't solve a problem just by throwing money at it," he says. And maybe some problems can't be solved at all, he adds.

"Lower your expectations of what government can do for you," Brown said. "Lower your expectations about the kind of never-ending accumulation of possessions people have gotten used to."

"We can't satisfy everyone. We can't service all the needs that are out there. Too many people are looking to government for too many things."

"I don't offer a great promise of a rosy tomorrow. I think we're going to have to work very hard just to stay where we are."

"This idea that we're charging forward with greater and greater success and more progress — that may be a little bit unrealistic." As governor, Brown has pursued a mix of conservative and liberal goals.

He joined Democrats in control of the state legislature to enact liberal programs which had been stalled in the Reagan years.

They reduced marijuana penalties, repealed laws against homosexuals, plugged so-called tax loopholes for business and extended unemployment benefits to farm workers.

Welfare rights attorneys now run the state health and welfare agency. Former Sierra Club officials now run the state resources agency.

But Brown's top priority was a pledge there would be no general new tax increase. He also supported and signed legislation for mandatory prison terms. He attacked state bureaucracy in terms reminiscent of Reagan's most severe criticism of big government.

Brown's state budget grew by only 6 per cent, compared with an average 12.2 per cent annual increase in the Reagan years.

He gave local schools a 5 per cent hike. He said if they want more, they must come up with reforms to give the public more for its money.

He set a dozen legislative goals for his first year in his inaugural address and achieved 11, including a landmark farm labor election measure.

But there are critics of Brown's antigovernment stance, including consumer advocate Ralph Nader.

"Jerry Brown has to face up to whether he will run government for the people or just run against government," Nader said. "He's becoming an increasing disappointment."

Atonement Expected
Cincinnati (UPI) — Rabbi Baruch Korff, a staunch defender of former President Richard Nixon, figures America will someday honor Nixon in a "day of atonement."

Commissioner At FDA Denies Being Influenced

WASHINGTON (AP) — The consumer commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration issued a voluminous report Tuesday rebutting employees' charges of industry influence on himself, his predecessors and the FDA.

The 909-page "Commissioner's Report," culminating a year-long investigation conducted by Dr. Alexander M. Schmidt, concluded there was no basis for charges that industry influence pushed unsafe drugs onto the market.

The allegations were raised by FDA employees at a Senate hearing last year.

"My investigation has not only revealed no evidence to support such general charges; it has produced evidence to refute those charges — evidence long available," Schmidt said.

But Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., chairman of the hearing where 14 present and former FDA employees made the charges on Aug. 15, 1974 said he continues to doubt the agency's "capability to protect the health and safety of the American people."

Angela Davis Has Job At Claremont Colleges

CLAREMONT, Calif. (AP) — Controversial Communist, feminist and black militant Angela Davis resumes her career as college teacher this week, and the college that hired her is already sorry about it.

The man who offered her the job at exclusive — and conservative — Claremont Colleges has been fired. Some officials say he may have hired Miss Davis to embarrass Claremont.

Claremont's governing body voted to withdraw the job offer, but Miss Davis had already signed the contract.

She was not available for comment Tuesday, her attorney said.

The announcement that she would teach a series of weekend classes on "Black Women and the Development of the Black Community" has brought threats from alumni and donors warning that endowments for the half-dozen small, private and very expensive colleges 30 miles east of Los Angeles might be canceled.

Miss Davis, 31, was acquitted in 1972 of charges of murder and kidnapping stemming from an abortive attempt to free prisoners at the Marin County courthouse. A judge and three other persons were killed.

She was fired as an assistant professor of philosophy at UCLA in 1969 because of her Communist affiliation. Lengthy court battles to retain her position were fruitless and she has not held a teaching position since.

She was hired at Claremont by James Garrett, who was fired last spring as director of the Black Studies Center at the colleges. School officials say he was not fired because he had offered Miss Davis the job, but because of his alleged participation in a sit-in protesting cuts in the black studies budget.

Joseph B. Platt, president of Harvey Mudd College of the Claremont system and chairman of the Council of Presidents, said some officials question Garrett's reason for hiring Miss Davis.

"The thought has crossed my mind that the intention may have been to embarrass us," he said.

Garrett, however, denies any such motive and said Miss Davis had applied for the job after it was advertised in trade journals.

Garrett also said he had told Brooks and several college presidents he was thinking of hiring Miss Davis.

"They said it would be all right," said Garrett, adding that he was told, "We've had Marxists teaching here before."

Howard Brooks, provost of the Claremont University Center, and others deny they were aware of the negotiations. Brooks said the first he knew of it was when he routinely received a copy of a letter from Garrett to Miss Davis, offering her the job.

The next week, Brooks says he notified the Council of Presidents of Garrett's offer. The group voted to withdraw the offer. Garrett was fired at the same meeting.

Shortly after voting to rescind the job offer, the council learned that Miss Davis, who now lives in Oakland, had signed the contract.

She will be paid $3,000 for teaching five weekend classes. Class size has been limited to 25 students.

Denver (UPI) — Thousands had seen the face of Edna Juanita Davis, but few knew her.

Mrs. Davis was the widow of Herndon Davis, a nationally known painter who in 1936 while drunk on rum and Coke produced the famous "Face upon the Floor" in Central City's Teller House Bar. She served as his model.

Mrs. Davis, 85, a recluse since her husband's death 13 years ago, was found dead at her home Friday. She will be buried Wednesday.

Mrs. Davis, born July 18, 1890, on a plantation in Jamaica, was an artist like her husband, although she was never as well known. Davis was an artist for the Denver Post and the Rocky Mountain News and was working on a mural for the Smithsonian Institute at the time of his death.

But he was best known for the "Face upon the Floor" which he painted at a small Colorado mining town. That painting attracts thousands of tourists each year.

Teamster Post To Tony Pro

(c) Chicago Sun-Times

A labor racketeer linked to the disappearance of former Teamster boss James Hoffa has successfully lobbied for a major appointment in the union.

Anthony (Tony Pro) Provenzano, one of three men Hoffa reportedly planned to meet the day he disappeared, is expected to be named an international organizer of the Teamsters at a dinner in New York Sunday, according to sources familiar with the union.

Provenzano was a vice president of the Teamsters in New Jersey before being convicted in 1963 of labor extortion. He had a falling out with Hoffa while both were serving prison terms in the federal penitentiary in Lewisburg, Pa.

Provenzano has been called to testify before a federal grand jury about Hoffa's disappearance and is under investigation in connection with a $4 million loan from the Teamsters pension fund to a Florida developer.

Provenzano had been barred from union activity for several years after his conviction, and the appointment as an organizer would be his first official post with the Teamsters since then. He would be based in Florida.

Federal officials also indicated that the colleagues of a second man Hoffa was to have met the day he disappeared have expanded their activities in Teamsters affairs.

The cronies of Anthony (Tony Jack) Giacalone have stepped up activities in his home base of Detroit and several other Midwest areas. Giacalone has also been called before the federal grand jury in Detroit investigating Hoffa's June 30 disappearance.

The third man Hoffa reportedly was to have met before he disappeared, Charles O'Brien, also has moved up in the Teamsters hierarchy. Several months ago O'Brien was appointed an international organizer in Florida.

Food Aid Is Debated By Senate

Washington (AP) — The Senate voted Tuesday to require that 80% of credit sales under the food for peace program go to the neediest countries.

The provision was added to a $3 billion foreign aid authorization bill with the adoption of an amendment sponsored by Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore.

The amendment, approved 52-39, requires that at least 80% of the estimated $876.4 million available for food for peace loans this year go to countries with a per capita gross national product of less than $250.

Present law and a prior House vote would limit the possible allocation of food aid for political purposes to 30%.

An amendment by Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa, to require at least 70% of the food to be allocated to countries with a per capita gross national product for less than $200 was defeated 53-36. In offering his substitute formula, Hatfield said the $200 limitation would have excluded Egypt.

The Senate also adopted by a voice vote an amendment by Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., to forbid granting humanitarian and economic aid to any country "which engages in a consistent pattern of gross violations of internationally recognized human rights," including torture and prolonged detention without charges.

Final action on the bill is expected Wednesday.

The measure is limited to food, humanitarian and economic aid for the 27-month period which began July 1.

MOORE ... knife may be original. UPI

Man Thinks Knife Was Jim Bowie's

Tuscaloosa, Ala. (UPI) — Bart Moore, an employee at the University of Alabama, is convinced he is the owner of the original Bowie knife used by the American hero who perished at the Alamo. But the curator of the Alamo Museum in San Antonio, who heard of Moore's claims, said there is no such thing as the original Bowie knife.

The comment came from curator Charles Long after receiving word from Moore that the knife was found in the debris by a Mexican soldier during the siege on the Alamo. Moore said the Mexican found the knife not far from where Bowie and other American heroes perished in 1836.

He said the knife, now valued at $55,000, was given to his grandfather by the Mexican in 1890 to repay a $5 debt.

Long said Bowie had hundreds of the knives made and the one Moore showed him allegedly was made by James Black, who produced several versions of the famed Bowie knife.

The legendary knife was used by hunters and pioneers in the 19th century. It was known for its large single-edged blade and was carried in a heavy sheath.

After Bowie died, Long says, Black sold hundreds of the knives in the U.S. and Canada and hundreds more were made for him in England.

"He handed them out at ceremonial functions," Long said. "My knife fulfills all the legends about the Bowie knife and the experts I have talked to say it is incredibly unique," Moore said. "I don't know if mine was made by Black, but that's what the experts tell me," he said. "They claim Black went blind about five years after the Alamo and didn't make very many knives."

"But mine bears an acorn and the initials 'J. B.' like the sign a silversmith or craftsman would use, and apparently no other knives with that symbol have been found," he said.

Moore said he corresponds often with knife expert Bill Hughes at Texarkana (Tex.) College. Hughes said the initial-symbol likely belonged to the Bowie knife craftsman Black.

He said he has no plans to sell the knife. He wants to keep it in the family and pass it on to his son.

Pill's Popularity Declines Slightly

By The Associated Press

More and more women are using the diaphragm and the intrauterine device, but the birth control pill is still the most popular way to prevent pregnancy despite reports on its dangers, a survey of experts shows.

"The pill is still the most commonly requested method, but there is some decrease," said Dr. James McClenahan, director of Student Health Services at Stanford University. "There has been some growth of interest in the IUD, but more interest than ever before in the diaphragm."

McClenahan's response was typical of those from college health services, birth control clinics, gynecologists and population experts surveyed nationwide by The Associated Press.

Rosalyn Kenworthy, a sex counselor with Cornell University Health Services, said pill users have decreased slightly over the past three years from about 70 to 65 per cent.

The federal Food and Drug Administration recently said that birth control pills increase the risk of heart attacks and that women over 40 should use other forms of contraception.

The widely publicized warning appeared in the FDA's July-August drug bulletin. It said two recent British studies "strongly suggest that oral contraceptive users are at a greater risk of developing coronary thrombosis than nonusers."

It has long been held that pill users have an increased risk of stroke, blood clots lodging in the lungs and inflammation of the veins. The Center for Disease Control in Atlanta also has found that the death rate from using IUDs is lower than that from oral contraceptives. Some IUDs have been known to cause vaginal bleeding, pelvic infection and perforation of the uterus.

Yet nearly 81 per cent of over 400,000 new women patients seen by Planned Parenthood clinics last year chose oral contraception as the method they wanted.

"They seem to take the position that the pill with its problems is still better than getting pregnant," a spokeswoman said.

"It's still the most effective way, and it gives me peace of mind," one 28-year-old mother of two said.

But a 31-year-old magazine editor, who stopped using pills

after a four-year period, disagreed. "They frighten me — scare me," she said. "As a woman who has reached this age and who has not yet had a child, I think more and more about all the things collecting in my body that may have detrimental side effects on a fetus."

According to the Population Council, among a group of one million women who do not use any contraception, 600,000 would become pregnant and 150 would die of related complications. Among other groups of the same size, 150,000 diaphragm or condom users would become pregnant and 33 die; 35,000 women using IUDs would become pregnant and 19 die; and 20,000 women on the pill would become pregnant and 35 die, all but five from pill complications.

There is no consensus among gynecologists about the safest and most effective method.

Some doctors, such as Dr. Heinz Berendes, chief of contraceptive evaluation at the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, says the IUD is the safest and most effective method.

But Dr. Donald Chambers of Sinai and Lutheran hospitals in Baltimore, Md., thinks a combination of rhythm and the diaphragm is medically best. Dr. Christopher Tietze of the Population Council, says the condom and diaphragm are the most effective if the woman is willing to use abortion as a backup when failure occurs.

Dr. Raymond L. Vande Wiele, chairman, department of obstetrics and gynecology at Columbia Presbyterian College of Physicians and Surgeons, looks at it another way:

"The most important approach in contraception is to know the advantages and disadvantages and adjust it to the patient. For example, a patient who doesn't have intercourse frequently should not take pills. That's overprotection."

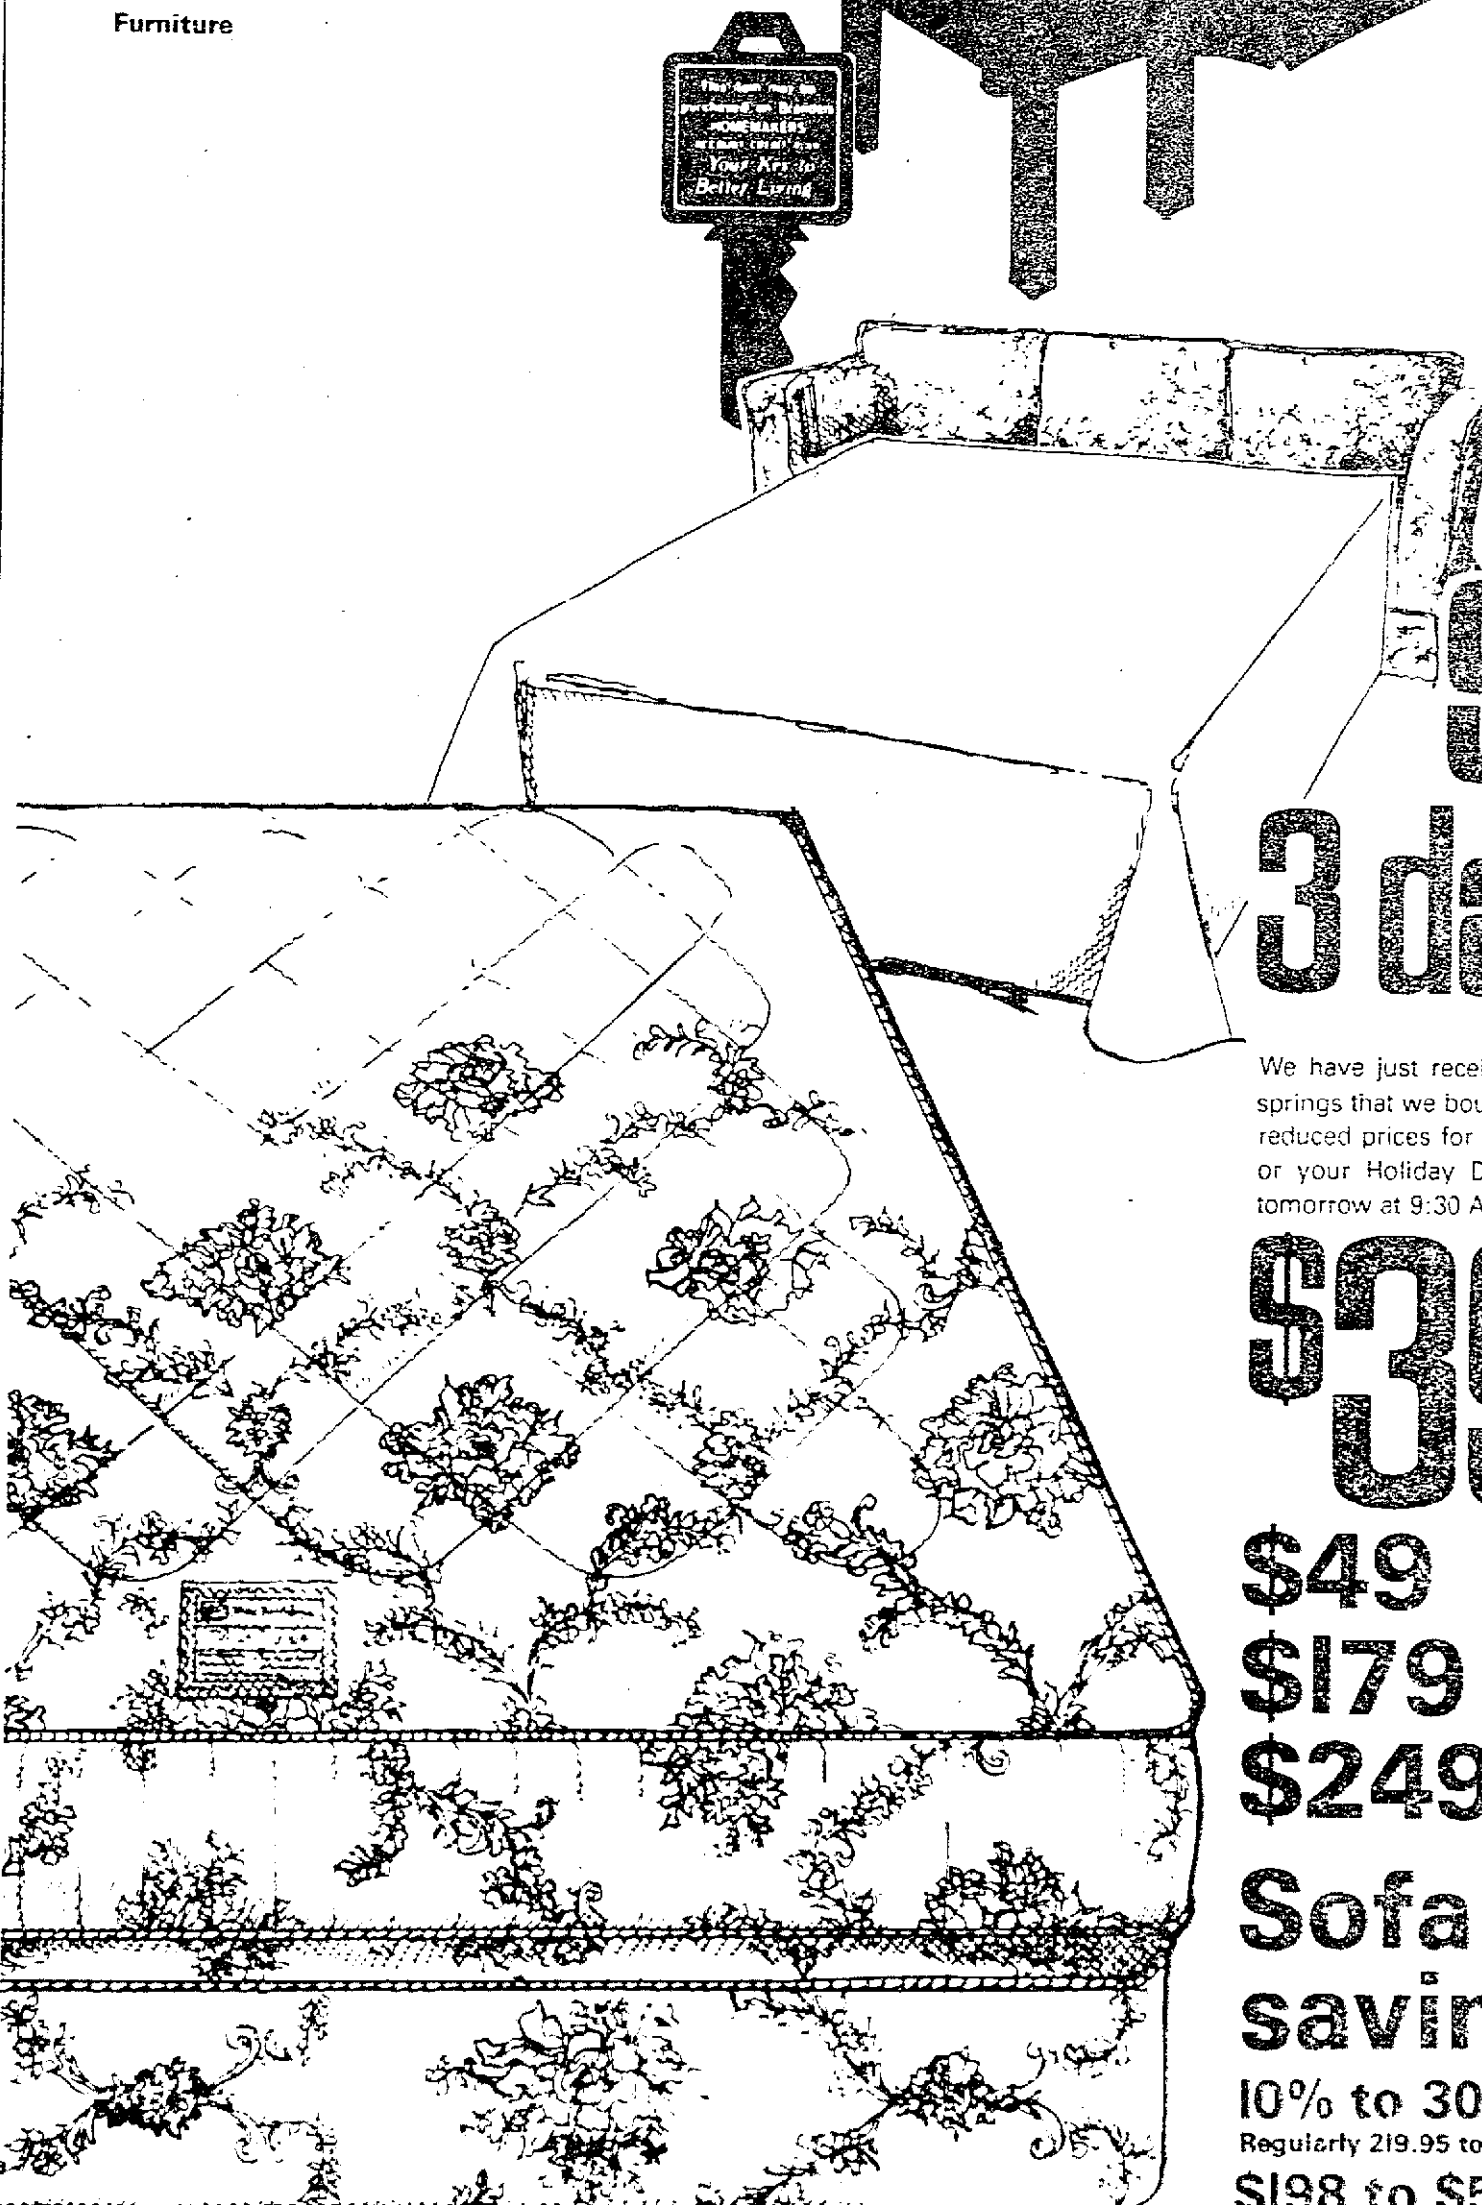

Many single women who have stopped taking the pill have done so because of the infrequency in their lives of the sexual act.

"I was amazed at the number of women using diaphragms," said Dr. Audrey Jean Sheehy, assistant director of Health Services, Barnard College. "Many told me they didn't have someone steady, so the diaphragm was more suited."

Cheney Rises High Anonymously

•The New York Times
By CHARLES MOHR

Washington — Richard B. Cheney, the newly designated White House chief of staff, may not have deliberately cultivated a passion for anonymity, but few men have risen so high with so little public exposure.

The new chief assistant to President Ford is not even listed in "Who's Who in America," and is little known to much of Washington, much less the nation.

"He's not a man whose name is on everyone's lips," said a friend of the 34-year-old Cheney.

However, among the network of other young administrators, "issue men" and staff assistants in the capital, Cheney enjoys an unusually high reputation for competence, brains and for skill at the subtle art of getting things done for an important boss. This praise also comes from intellectuals outside, but familiar with the workings of the White House.

The incumbent White House chief of staff, Donald H. Rumsfeld, who has been nominated as secretary of defense, has given his deputy, Cheney, great access to the President and to shared responsibility, which may have helped prepare Cheney for his promotion.

Cheney has spent most of his career as a deputy to Rumsfeld.

Masters In Poli Sci

Cheney studied political science at the University of

BORN IN LINCOLN . . . Richard B. Cheney.

Wyoming, where he earned a master's degree.

Cheney then won the prestigious Joseph Davies Fellowship, and came to Washington to work as an intern in the office of Rep. Sam Steiger, R-Wis.

In 1969 he became the top assistant to Rumsfeld, who was named to direct the Office of Economic Opportunity. Cheney continued to serve as Rumsfeld's aide at the Cost of Living Council from 1971 to 1973. Both agencies are now defunct.

While Rumsfeld served as ambassador to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, Cheney returned to private life in the investment counseling business. He again served under Rumsfeld on the team supervising the transsition period of the Ford presidency and came to the White House 14 months ago when Rumsfeld became chief of staff.

He's Loyal To Boss

Not surprisingly, Cheney is described as extremely loyal to Rumsfeld, but a number of friends think Cheney may be somewhat less conservative.

"It's hard to tell, though," said one man outside government. "I don't mean this in a disparaging way, but Dick is a very secretive man, very skillful at concealing what he thinks about you, about other persons and what you are saying on an issue."

A White House official described Cheney as a conservative much in tune with Ford's own philosophy, but said, "He doesn't stand up and salute on conservative issues."

Born In Lincoln, Neb.

Cheney was born Jan. 30, 1941, in Lincoln, Neb., but moved with his family at age 13 to Casper, Wyo. He married Lynne Vincent of Casper Aug. 29, 1964. They have two daughters, 9 and 6 years of age, and live in suburban Bethesda, Md.

Mrs. Cheney teaches English parttime at Georgetown University and has written frequently for newspaper magazine sections and for the quarterly American Heritage.

She and her husband try to slip away each summer, as they did this August, for a backpacking and fishing trip in the Wind River Mountains of Wyoming.

Illegal Money Aided Bush Campaign

•The New York Times

Washington — The 1970 Texas campaign and other political activities of George Bush are expected to come under scrutiny when he goes before the Senate for hearings on confirmation as director of central intelligence.

The 51-year-old Bush is the first person chosen for the intelligence post with a strongly partisan political background. Before assuming his present position as U.S. representative to Peking, he served as a representative from Texas and as chairman of the Republican National Committee.

One aspect of his unsuccessful 1970 campaign for the Senate that may attract attention, according to Senate sources, was the transfer of a $40,000 payment by wire money order from President Nixon's illegal "Townhouse" campaign financing operation to Glenn Adversing of Houston, a concern that was handling a substantial amount of Bush's campaign promotion. That was part of $106,000 the Bush campaign received from the Nixon group.

Under the old corrupt practices act, in effect in 1970, contributions received by a candidate directly and not through an election committee had to be reported to the Secretary of the Senate. There is no record that this contribution was reported to either the clerk of the House or the secretary of the Senate.

The question was examined by the Watergate special prosecutor's office during its investigation of the Townhouse operation, the sources said, but in the prosecutor's report last month there was no mention of the case. The prosecutor has routinely declined to comment on individual investigations, but those familiar with the office's operation said there was no indication the matter would be prosecuted.

Bush could not be reached for comment Tuesday night.

Factor In Rocky Choice

Marvin Collins, Bush's campaign manager during the campaign, said the issue about the $40,000 arose in late August 1974 when Bush was under consideration for appointment as vice president. Administration sources at that time said the matter was one factor in President Ford's selection of Nelson A. Rockefeller as vice president.

Collins said he handled Bush's campaign finance reports and that he had "no independent memory" of making a report. But he said the contribution was not construed as having been made directly to Bush and this was "probably why it was never reported."

The Townhouse operation, as it was called in press accounts and by the prosecutor's office, was an apparatus created by Nixon and directed by H. R. Haldeman, his chief of staff, to dispense money to candidates Nixon favored in 1970 House, Senate and gubernatorial races. It derived its name from the fact it was located in a Washington, D.C., townhouse.

Three Pleaded Guilty

Herbert W. Kalmbach, Nixon's personal lawyer, and two former White House aides, Harry Dent and Jack Gleason, pleaded guilty to election law violations connected with the Townhouse operation, which was found not to be registered with the clerk of the House as required by the corrupt practices act.

According to information made available to the prosecutor's office, Bush received a total of $106,000 from the Townhouse operation, the sources said. The bulk of the money, $66,000, was delivered in $2,000 and $3,000 amounts to a series of campaign committees.

In mid-October 1970, Bush's campaign against Lloyd Bentsen, now the Democratic separator from Texas, was floundering, sources said, and there was a last minute effort by the Nixon White House to pump money into it. The $40,000 contribution was part of this flurry of support, which proved unsuccessful, as Bush lost the election.

St. Louis Sheriff Uses Hotel As Jail

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Two prisoners and their guards dined on lobster in two eighth-floor rooms of the luxurious Chase-Park Plaza Hotel. All that was missing was a view of the park.

Although the men were returned to a city jail Tuesday after spending the night in plush surroundings, hotel officials were livid over their prestigious facility's involvement in the latest move by City Sheriff Raymond C. Percich to dramatize overcrowded jail conditions.

However, Percich said he was "irked when people say I'm just trying to make a point."

The balding sheriff, who has been in office for four years, said he chose the hotel because it was near the Municipal Courts building and because it was tall enough that prisoners could not escape out a window. The sheriff said he checked into the least expensive rooms available, those facing away from adjacent Forest Park.

The hotel has billed the city $56 for the rooms and $32 for six lobster dinners. Percich said he would also charge the city for a $2 tip he gave to a hotel employee.

Irate hotel officials summoned city police officers, who interrupted Percich, three deputies and the two shackled prisoners while they were watching the Monday night football game.

Percich refused to admit the officers, and Chief of Police Eugene J. Camp said later that police had no basis for evicting the occupants in the first place.

"We don't have any control over a man like that," said Camp, who contended Percich was trying to publicize the overcrowding.

Chase-Park Vice President Scott Morrison, saying he had already heard joking references to "the new city workhouse on the west end," said hotel lawyers were considering a damage suit against Percich.

Morrison said the prisoners presented a threat to other hotel guests. He also said Percich did not say that prisoners would be housed in the rooms, but Percich denied that accusation.

"The sheriff himself was the only one who registered at the front desk," Morrison said. "The prisoners were taken up the back hallway through the garage and onto the employe service elevator."

Someone contacted hotel security officials after spotting the three deputies and two prisoners — one awaiting imprisonment on a stealing charge and the other awaiting jail for theft.

Percich said he was "set up" by the hotel on the lobster meals to cast him in an adverse light.

"We ordered the $3.85 special of the day," he said, "but they came up about an hour later with lobster tails. They said I ordered it and that's not true."

The city's jail overcrowding situation is nothing new. But it was heightened last year when a federal court order limited the number of prisoners in the city jail to 228. When other incarceration facilities were unable to handle the overflow, Percich began transporting male prisoners to jails throughout Missouri.

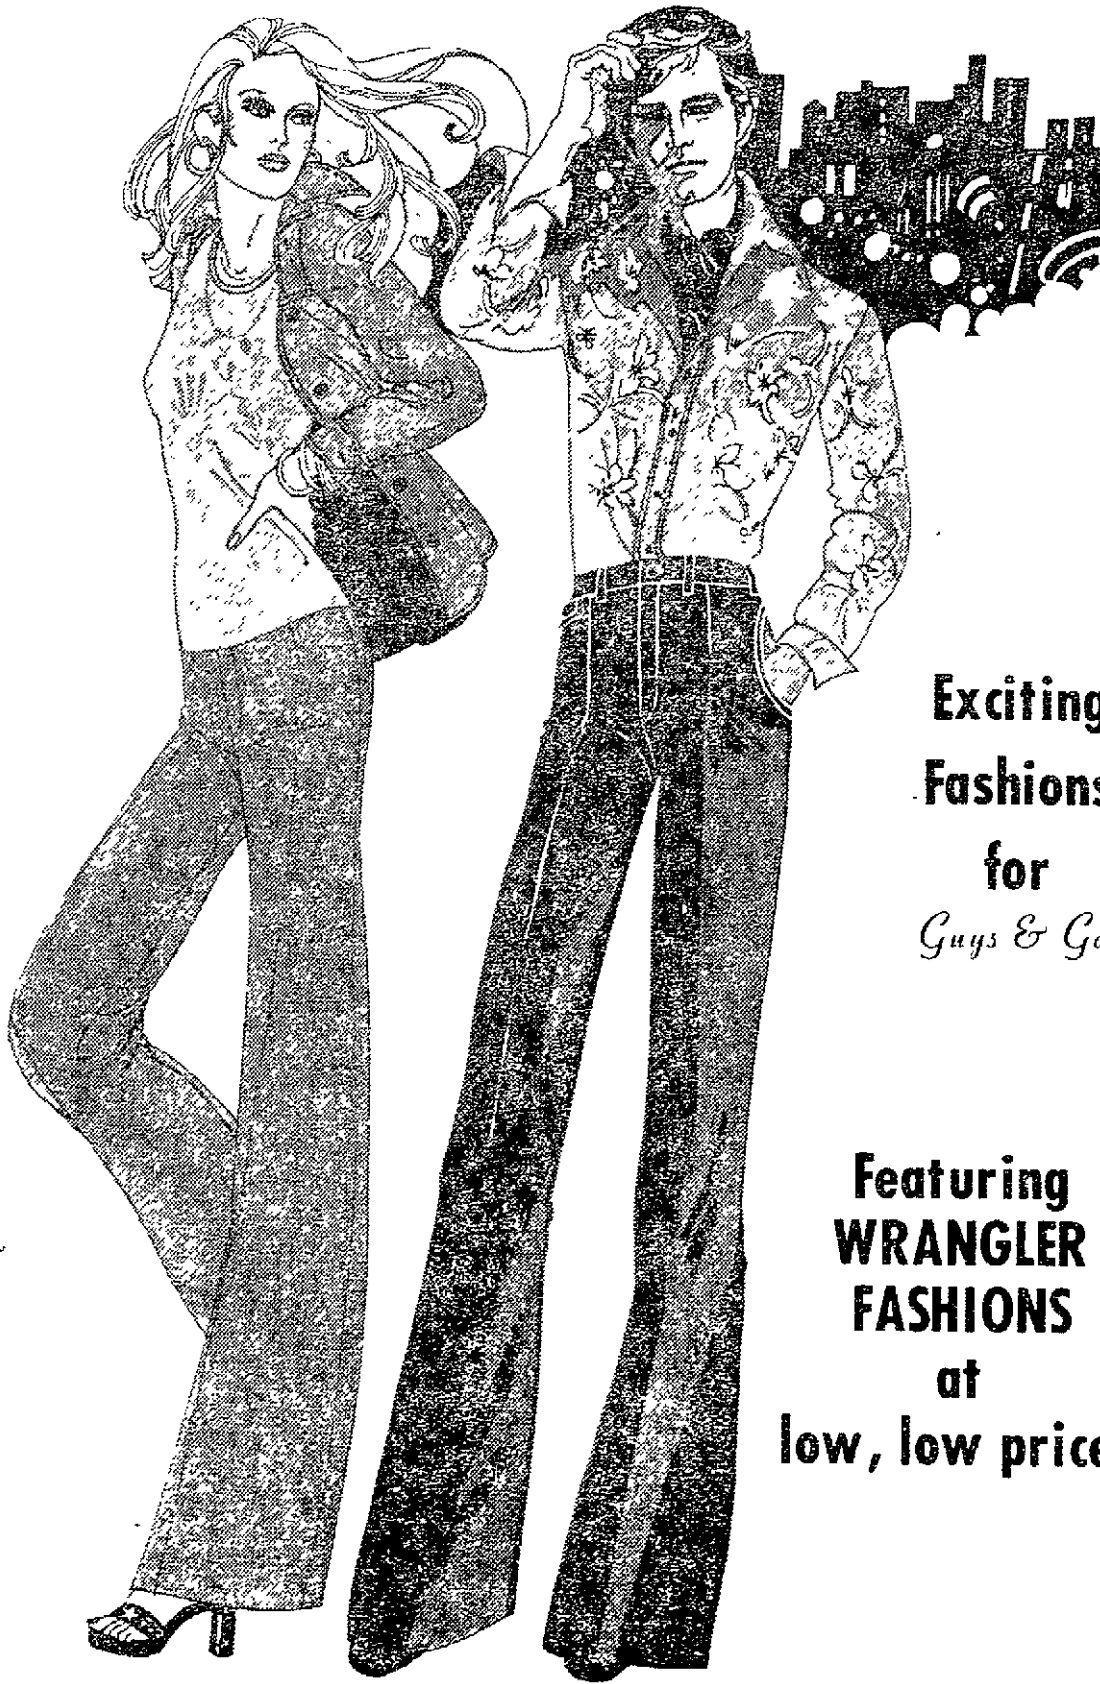

As of Monday, he had 114 prisoners housed in jails outside the city, including one prisoner at Kansas City, 300 miles west of St. Louis.

Hats Returning To Male Heads

By LAWRENCE VAN GELDER

New York — The fabulous invalid of men's fashion — the hat — is showing a bit of vigor and dash these days. Maybe not its old brimful; and perhaps it still looks peaked. But the hat is definitely not extinct.

Periodic revivals of men's hats are not unusual. If nothing else, politicians keep the memory of hats alive by literally and figuratively tossing them into the ring every now and then, even if they don't wear them any more.

But if any presidential hopeful wants to keep the venerable hat-tossing tradition alive while showing himself to be up to date, then the air in these coming months had better be filled not with flying fedoras but with dashing safari hats, striped English rugby hats, eight-piece peaked caps of the type favored by Babe Ruth; trooper caps looking as though they were issued by the quartermaster corps of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police; Russian-style fur headgear; berets, and captain's caps smacking of Piraeus Copenhagen.

'A Funsy Piece'

Designer John Weitz says, "the hat is having a revival as a funsy piece. It has suddenly appeared as the thing one wears when one is not serious, sneaking in through the back door of leisure time."

It is a revival not without its economic and sociological overtones and even some physiological benefits.

In the years since World War II, the American male has staged two major rebellions against the hat in which the chief casualty was the felt fedora that once constituted the crowning glory, however drab, of businessmen's attire.

The first rebellion took place after World War II, when homecoming servicemen by the thousands decided it was possible to live without the fedora. A second rebellion took place in the mid-Sixties, amid other rebellions against the establishment and its symbols.

A Matter Of Impact

By the time the sweet smoke cleared, the fedora no longer mattered greatly. According to John Molloy, a researcher and consultant on dress, the fedora is now an optional element of attire for men concerned with the impact of their clothing on those they deal with.

Jumpsuits Selling Amazingly Strong

By BERNARDINE MORRIS

New York — Many fashion designers showed them, but hardly any anticipated that the jumpsuit would be the runaway success it became this fall.

"If I had, I would have made more of them," Kasper said frankly.

Victor Joris admits he is staggered by the 38,000 suits in jersey ($80) or gabardine ($110) his company, Cuddlecote, has shipped. "Stores bought three or four of them in the beginning, but pretty soon they started to sell all over the country — in Texas, California, Florida," he said. "We've practically converted our factory to a jumpsuit factory."

He admitted that he had a hunch the jumpsuit might sell as a fashion item for people who like to keep up, but that he did not foresee the strength of its appeal.

"That sort of thing sometimes happens with a good shirt or a skirt," he explained. "But this is a major purchase."

With a good thing on their hands, designers are not likely to let it go. So the spring collections being shown this week are replete with new versions for warm weather.

Jumpsuits are the liveliest contributions to the season ahead at Bill Blass. Nothing that could be mistaken for a

In his newly published book, "Dress for Success," Molloy devotes six lines in 245 pages to the hat. Research testing on the importance of the hat as an element in businessmen's dress, he said, revealed that six lines were all hats merited.

"It proved hats are virtually meaningless," he said. "I first started testing them 10 or 11 years ago. At that time it was a positive in certain parts of the country to wear a hat. In the Midwest, in certain corporations, a hat was a required piece of equipment. It's virtually an optional now."

However, when it comes to the wearing of the so-called fun hats in leisure time, Molloy says tests show them to have a favorable impact on others, provided the hats suggest what he described as an upper-middle-class pursuit — shooting grouse, hunting tigers or playing tennis, for example.

Hat Makers Criticized

The hat manufacturers, said Charles Grodd, president of Paul Stuart, a highly successful men's apparel store on Madison Avenue, had much to do with the decline of hat-wearing.

"They did not know how to adapt — like dinosaurs," he said. "They didn't understand what was happening to American taste."

What was wrong, he said, was that the hat was being treated as a necessity, not as an accessory — as something that stereotyped a man rather than as something that lent itself to flattering a man and what he wore.

The stereotype, he said, was a "rather stiff, unbending, rigid, one-look type of hat that did not take into account either what was happening in styles or fashions or what a man really felt at ease with. It sat on his head."

Cold Is A Reason

Fashion aside, the advent of cold weather provides a good reason for wearing a hat.

The head, notes John Rhoades, the program coordinator for Outward Bound, the outdoor adventure schools that grew out of a World War II survival training program, is the body's cooling mechanism. And going hatless on a cold day can permit a prodigious loss of warmth.

"People have died in the outdoors because they didn't have something to keep their head warm," he insisted, adding the following advice:

"If your feet are cold, put on a hat."

mechanic's outfit, of course. They're supple, gentle affairs in striped jersey or crepe de chine and one has pleated legs that takes it far from the workclothes category.

Ordinary trousers in pinstriped wools or flannel are accompanied by vests and coats for street wear, giving a fresh dimension to the pants suit.

And for women who are ready for a skirt, Blass offers a lot of pleated ones topped by loose jackets in matching silk or cardigans that look hand-crocheted or hand-knitted. The suggestion of Chanel is inescapable for this sort of thing.

His piece de resistance for evening is a series of silk styles with hand-painted borders. The best of these is a tunic, open at the sides, over mauve pants. Even without the hand painting, his fabrics are magnificent.

Italian-style jumpsuits are being shown by Noi, the Florence-based company run by Cathy de Montezemolo, the former fashion editor, with Jack Bodi and Joe Leombruno, the photographers.

They specialize in easy jersey clothes with elastic at the shoulders or the waistline to provide effortless fit. The elastic details appear in jumpsuits as well as dresses. Both kinds of clothing have necklines that can be pulled down off the shoulder or are completely strapless.

1976 Powder Puff Derby Will End 28-Year Series

Wichita (AP) — The 1976 Powder Puff Derby will be the last flying of the all-woman transcontinental air race, the international president of the Niney-Nines, which sponsors the event, says.

Mrs. Pat McEwen of Wichita said the bicentennial race would end the annual event because of financial problems and energy conditions.

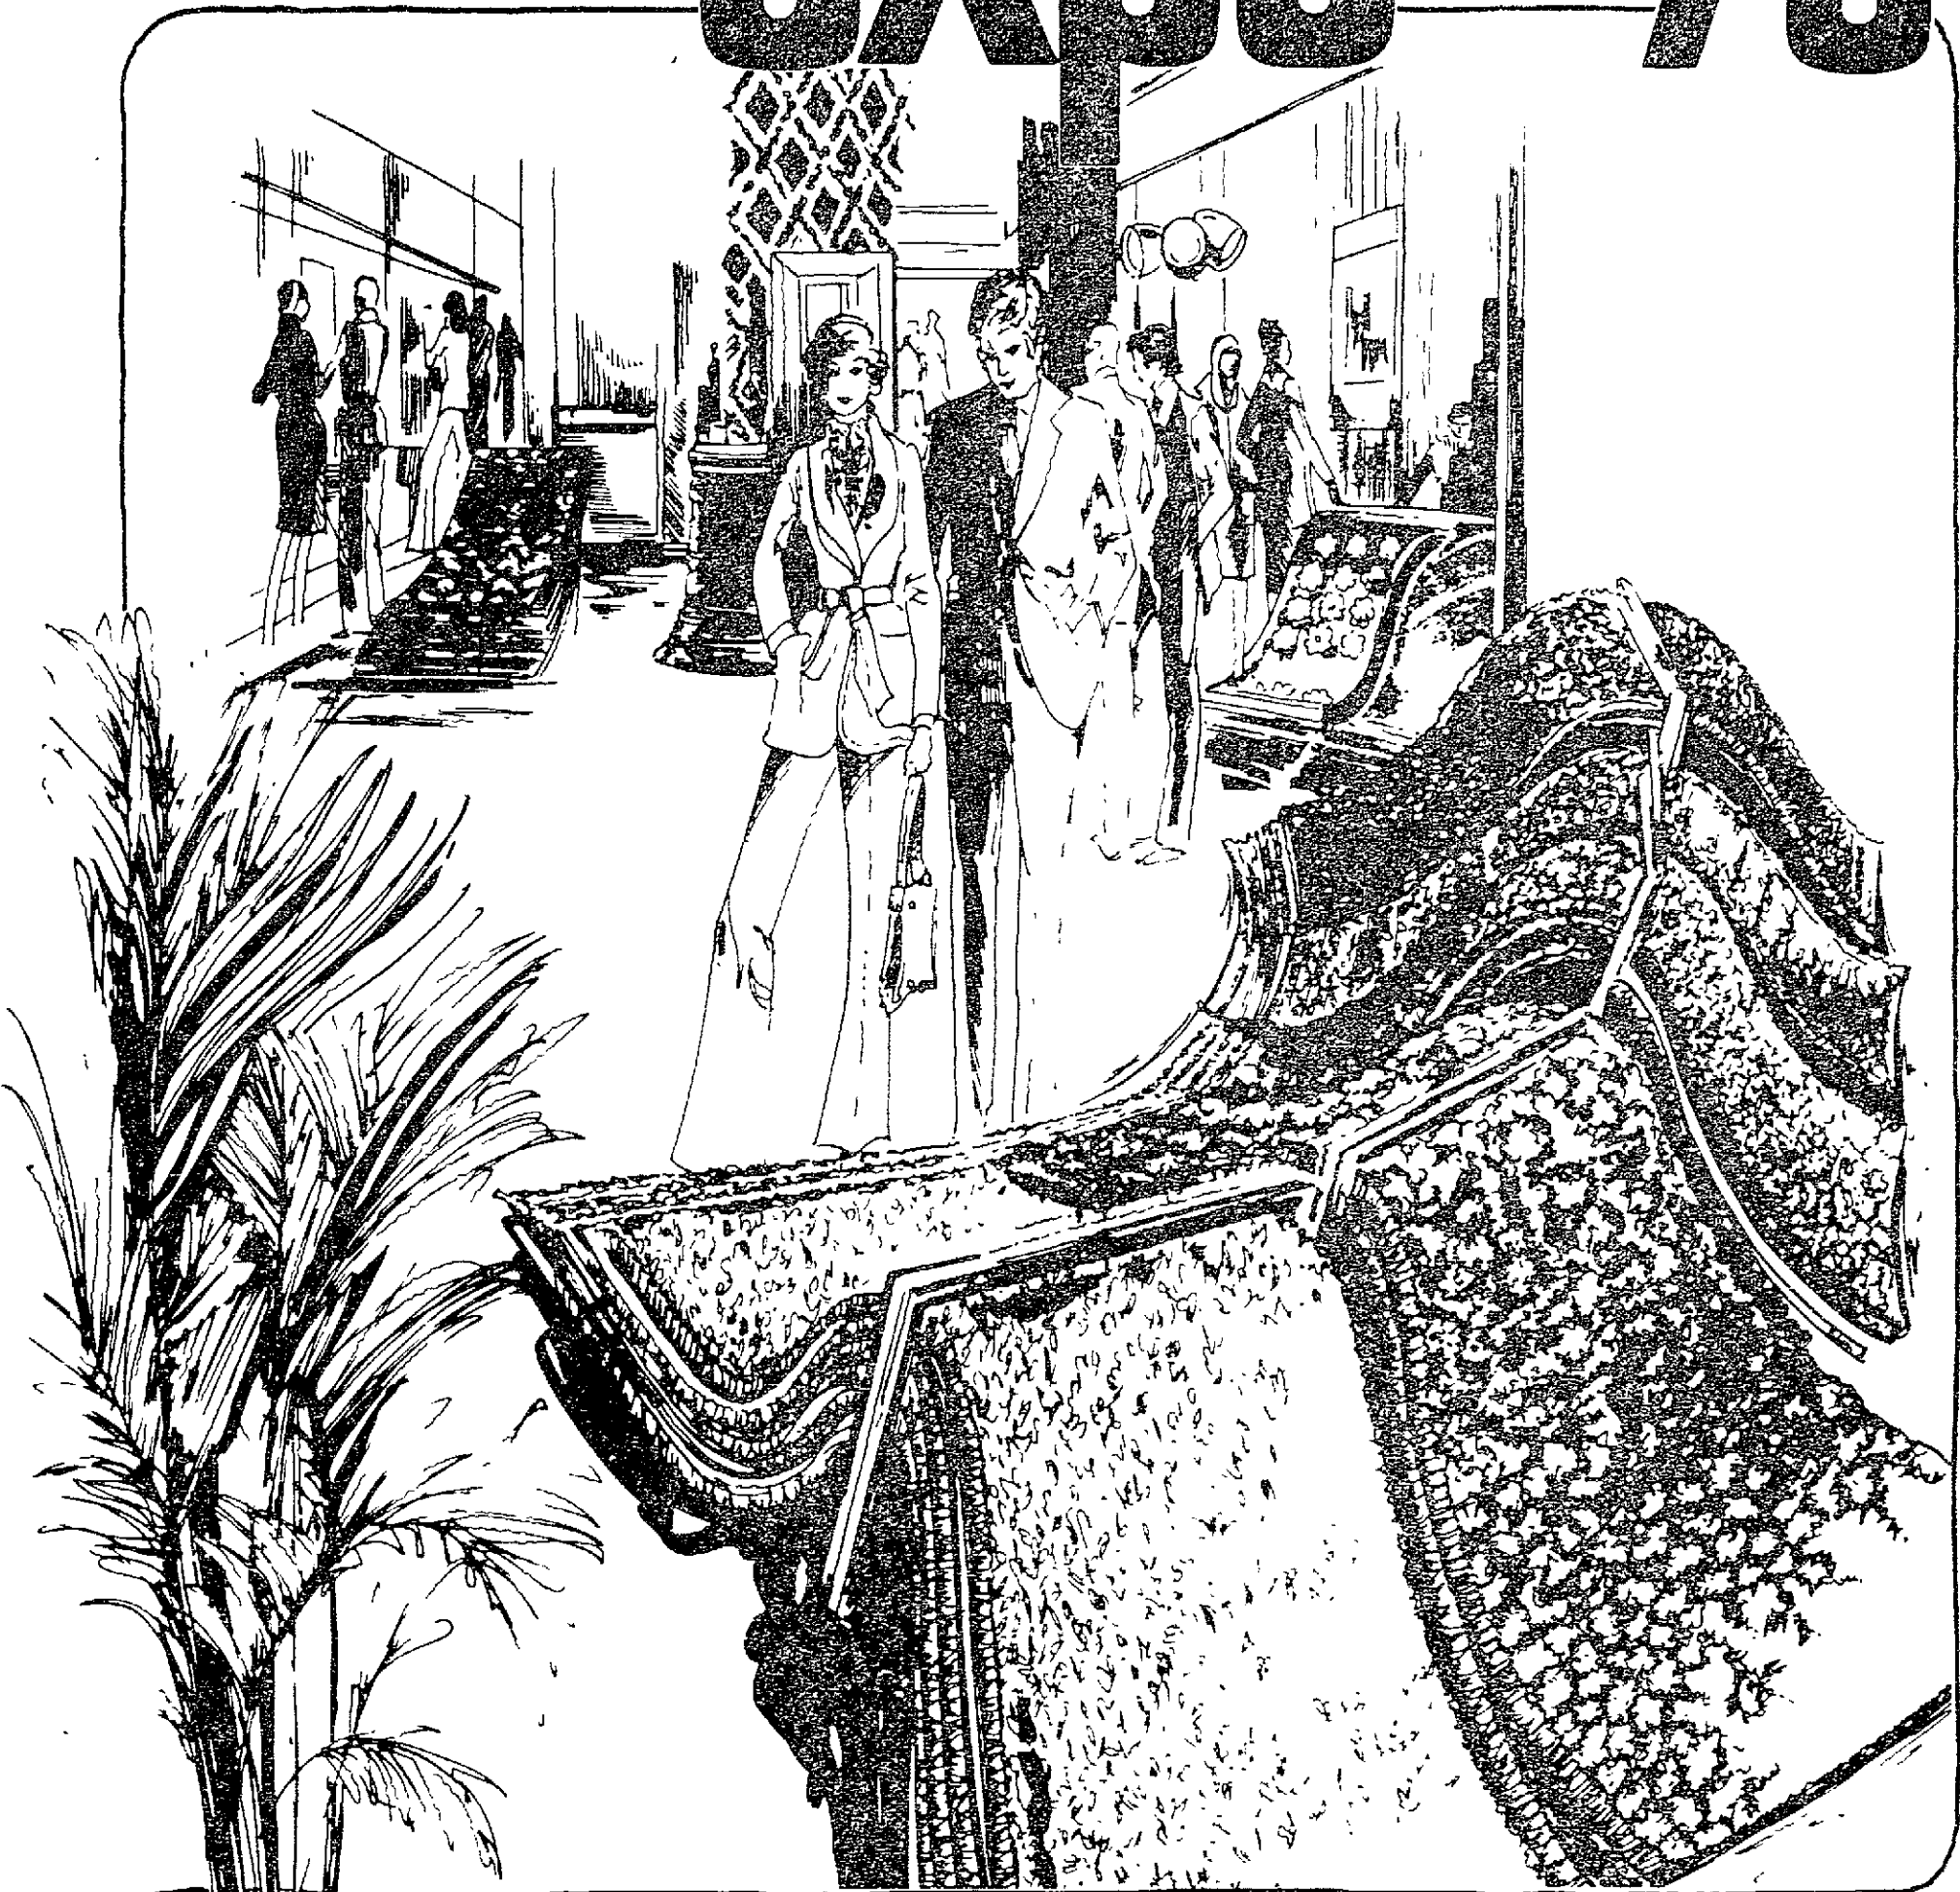

The group considered cancelling the 1975 race due to concern it might draw public criticism for using fuel to conduct an air race.

In its 28-year history, the Powder Puff Derby "inspired countless women to fly, to increase their proficiency and it has made the public aware of women's achievements," Mrs. McEwen said.

The Niney-Nines, which dedicated a new headquarters building this week at Oklahoma City, will continue to be active in aviation safety and educational programs, she added.

LINCOLN THEATRE ORCHESTRA . . . gave way to talkies.

Lincoln Symphony Entering 50th Year

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

The date, March 1, 1927. The setting: the St. Paul Methodist Church. The conductor: Rudolph Seidi of Omaha. The concert: a success.

"For a first performance, the Lincoln Little Symphony carried its role extremely well," read the March 2, 1927, page two review in The Lincoln Star.

But even more importantly, the review sub-head made a promise to Lincoln residents. "Backers Say Venture a Permanent Feature," it said.

And — thanks to dedicated musicians, contributors and season ticket holders — the Lincoln Symphony Orchestra has survived through the years. This year marks the beginning of the symphony's 50th season.

Planned In 1925

According to Louis Babst, current business manager for the symphony, organizational plans for the symphony were made in 1927, when he "met Don Berry and Luther Andrews on the corner of 12th and O Streets, during a lunch hour. The gist of the conversation was 'Will you join us in organizing a symphony?'"

It was after this meeting that the first symphony board of seven was recruited, Babst said. The board included Berry, Andrews, Babst, Mark Pierce, August H. Dietze, Earnest L. Harrison and William T. Quick.

Following the board's establishment, the Lincoln symphony trail-blazers managed to secure the Lincoln Junior Chamber of Commerce as sponsor of the planned orchestra and arranged to have rehearsals in the dining room of the old chamber office.

Only 25 to Start

"We proposed to call the orchestra The Lincoln Little Symphony, because it was little," Babst said. "There were only 25 members."

"The compelling reason for the organization of a symphony was due to the encroachment of the talky movies which began to replace their theater musicians at that time.

"There were five theater orchestras in regular use and each used from five to 20 men weekly," he explained. "They were losing their jobs. This was 52-week deal."

Although some of the theater musicians moved out of the Lincoln area to find work in their field elsewhere, several of these men remained in Lincoln to begin new careers.

"From this group a nucleus of well-trained musicians was available and generally comprised the membership of the first symphony," Babst said.

One original symphony member who was a part of this nucleus is Vernon A. Forbes Sr., whose son Vernon Forbes Jr. is now personnel manager for the symphony.

Longtime Teacher

Forbes worked six years with a theater orchestra — from the summer of 1921 to September 1927. When theater musicians were phased out, he became a music teacher in the Lincoln public schools — a job he kept for 22 years before moving to Scottsbluff until his retirement.

Although he had no part in the organization of the symphony, Forbes was a member of the orchestra from its inception through 1945.

"We were married on Jan. 6, 1927, and the next Sunday the symphony rehearsed," said Mrs. Forbes. "I was a symphony widow for the next 19 years."

Still Not Easy

But even after months and weeks of planning and rehearsals, things still were not easy for the industrious orchestra members.

Often faced with financial problems during the orchestra's early years, "players who were dedicated and determined to keep the symphony alive were willing to pro-rate the balance of the funds available" at the end of a season, Babst said.

"These first few years were tough ones," added Babst, who was a flutist for the symphony for 22 consecutive years.

Forbes remembers hard times for the symphony during the Depression years.

"Many of the players went to the musicians union to see if they would lower the players' salaries," he said, "even though it wasn't much to begin with."

But the most dramatic near-disaster came in 1944, Babst recalls: "The real shocker was to receive word from the bank that the funds we thought were available were not on deposit. And as we had already signed contracts for the coming season, the problem was critical.

Loss Made Up

"Our treasurer, it seemed, failed to recognize the difference between his money and the symphony's money. However, a group of dedicated businessmen — to whom we had always been grateful — immediately funded the loss."

The symphony's musicians have endured many fiascoes during years of performances.

Even the first symphony concert did not pass without incident — apparently one musician had the wrong music in front of him, so the first four measures of the opening number had to be repeated.

In another instance, the symphony had to compete with a noisy Nebraska thunderstorm, which rattled the old Liberty Theatre and nearly muffled the concert performance.

Yet another calamity at St. Paul Methodist Church in 1940 resulted in impromptu singing by the audience and a resumed performance by candlelight.

Transformer Blew

It was during a guest appearance by tenor James Melton that a transformer behind the church burned out, Babst recollected. A group of students in the audience started singing "Home on the Range," the rest of the audience joined in as did the well-known tenor. Finally, candles were placed on the piano and Melton continued with his performance.

And, wasn't it only a couple of years ago, when the symphony performed at its annual "Zoo's A Poppin'" concert, that a flock of resident geese at the Lincoln Children's Zoo tried to steal the show by marching in front of the audience and honking throughout the closing number?

Still, the symphony has grown. There are now 72 musicians in the orchestra. Its budget has increased from less than $1,000 for a three-concert season to over $100,000 for a season of 13 concerts.

Milestones

Milestones which have made the symphony an organization of community interest include:

1925 — Plans for a symphony orchestra were initiated.

1927 — The first Lincoln Little Symphony concert was held.

1928 — All-male orchestra was joined by female musicians, increasing the number to 35 musicians and qualifying the group as a full-fledged symphony orchestra.

1930 — Children's concerts in the public schools were started and non-resident guest artists began to appear with the orchestra.

1936 — Leo Kucinski became conductor of the symphony.

1942 — Kucinski, having enlisted in the armed services during World War II, was replaced by Henry Pensis of Sioux City, Iowa.

1943 — Due to illness, Pensis had to resign as conductor and was replaced by Rudolph Fellner of Chicago; the symphony began its annual student audition program.

1945 — Leo L. Kopp of Chicago became conductor and remained in that position for 30 years.

1957 — The Lincoln Youth Symphony was organized as was the Lincoln Symphony Guild.

1960 — First Headdress Ball, a major money-making project of the guild, was held.

1965 — The chorus was voted a permanent organization of the symphony.

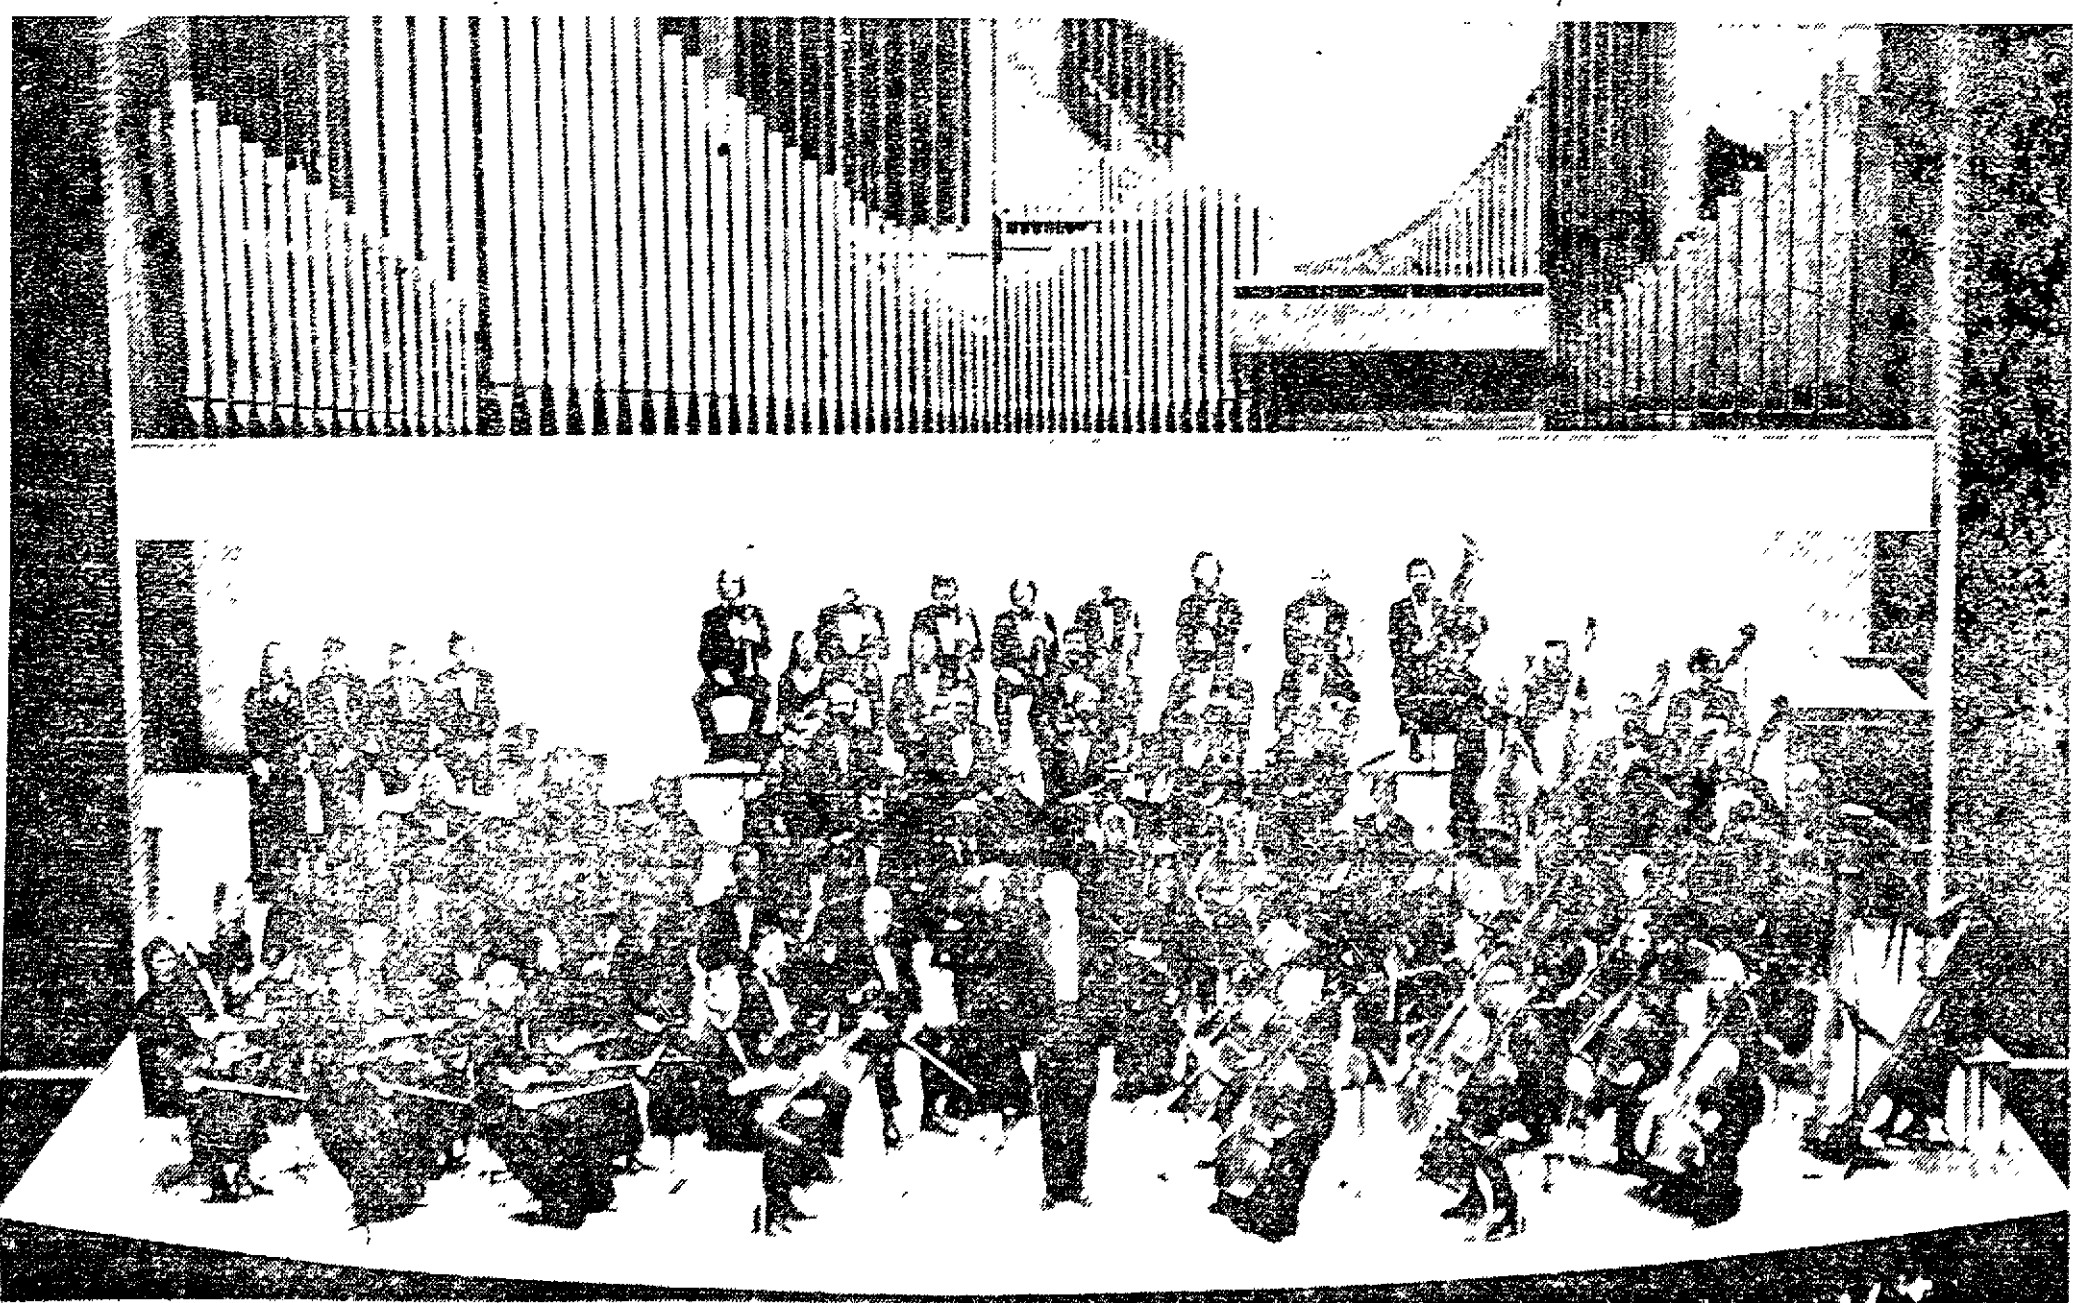

1975 — Dr. Robert Emile was selected to replace "conductor emeritus" Leo L. Kopp.

Symphony Calendar Commemorates 50th

The Lincoln Symphony Guild is now taking orders for its 1976 Lincoln Symphony Orchestra calendar entitled "Golden Reflections: Symphony of Fifty."

Compiled in conjunction with the Symphony's 50th anniversary, the calendar provides background material on the orchestra, a list of student audition winners and guest artists who have appeared with the symphony, as well as the dates of future concert performances.

Persons interested in purchasing one of the calendars should contact Mrs. Robert Crosby at 488-1700.

Pill Story A Little Hard To Swallow

DEAR ABBY: I am a 30-year-old bachelor. For the last year I've been going with a very pretty, 28-year-old school teacher. I have asked her to marry me, but she says she is not in any hurry to get married.

She told me that she has been taking birth control pills for the last four years "in case she gets raped."

We have never been intimate. Don't get me wrong. I'm no angel. I've tried, but she won't let me. She claims she is still a virgin. As far as I know, she doesn't date anyone else.

How do you figure this pill business?

LEARY IN SANTE FE
DEAR LEARY: It's possible, of course. But I find it a little hard to swallow.

DEAR ABBY: With Christmas approaching, my in-laws have already started to buy presents for our son (their only grandchild), which presents a problem.

Even though they know that we bought him a small tricycle for his third birthday last month, they have already bought him a racing car and a fire truck to drive. In addition to that, they've bought him a sled, a desk and chair set, an elaborate aquarium and a cowboy outfit, complete with a wooden "horsey" to ride. And they are still buying!

We know they enjoy shopping for their only grandson, but showering him with presents creates problems. Our gifts and the gifts of the other grandparents who can't afford much will look like nothing. Also, our son will not be able to appreciate anything.

Abby, do we have the right to limit the amount of gifts my husband's parents give our child?

My husband says we shouldn't deprive them of his pleasure. I disagree.

AWAITING YOUR WORD
DEAR AWAITING: I vote with you. If your parents want to indulge the child, suggest that they buy him one gift and start a savings account for him. The boy may not appreciate it now, but he will when it's time to go to college.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are senior citizens. We live in the suburbs and do not drive.

When we are invited out, is it proper to ask the hostess if she has invited someone who lives near us and drives and if he wouldn't mind meeting us at a convenient bus stop or picking us up? And if it's proper to ask, who should call these people to make the arrangements? The hostess or us?

If we could get there by a simple bus ride there would be no problem. But the places we're usually invited to require two or three bus transfers or are places that can't be reached by bus at all.

We realize that taxis are available, but they're too expensive for us.

TRANSPORTATION PROBLEM

DEAR PROBLEM: It is not improper to inquire. However, the thoughtful hostess who is aware of your circumstances will make appropriate suggestions when possible. (P.S. Chronic ride-alongs should remember to reward the driver with a modest gift.)

The bidding:

2 ♣	Pass	3 ♥	Pass

Opening lead - three of spades.

From a team of four match comes this deal where, at the first table, the bidding went as shown and West led a spade, won by South with the king.

Realizing how important it was to keep East out of the lead to prevent a spade return through his J-5, declarer played a low diamond to the ace and a low diamond back. When East covered the four with the nine, South followed low, fervently hoping West would be forced to win the trick with the ten or queen, the only diamonds missing at this point.

As a result of this unusual play, declarer made the contract. West won the diamond with the ten and could not do

South any damage, whatever he returned. Declarer was bound to score at least nine tricks consisting of a spade, a heart, four diamonds and three clubs.

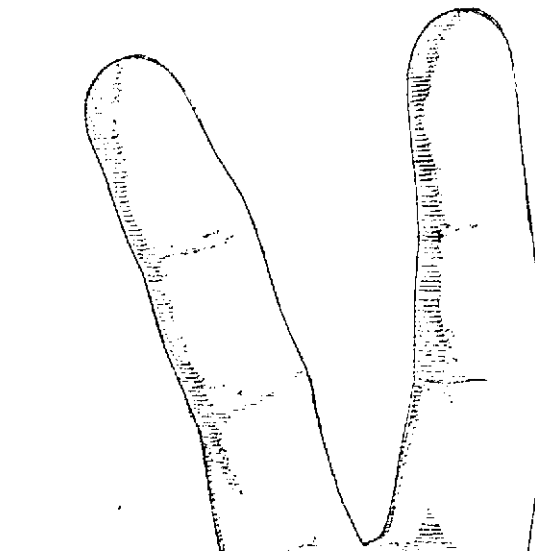

At the second table, West likewise led a spade against three notrump, South winning the queen with the king. But here declarer went down one, through no fault of his own.

He also played a low diamond to the ace at trick two, but West, instead of following suit routinely with the five, smoothly played the ten on declarer's deuce!

This seemingly unimportant variation in the play had a disastrous effect upon declarer. He could no longer establish his diamonds without subjecting himself to a killing spade return from East.

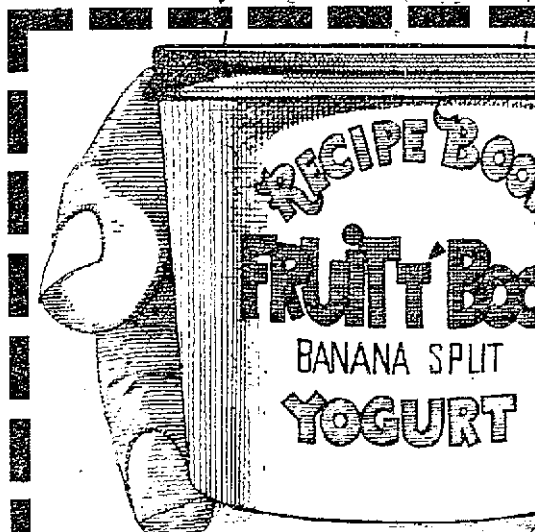

South continued with a diamond to his king and hopefully played a third diamond, but East was able to take the lead with the queen as a result of West's inspired unblocking play. He returned a spade and South sadly found himself going down one.

Osborne Votes For NU

Nebraska's Tom Osborne is one of 42 members of the United Press International's Major College Football Ratings Board and he isn't hiding the fact that one of the four first-place votes his Cornhuskers got this week came from him.

"I voted for Nebraska this week," Osborne said after Tuesday's practice. "I figure this way — that the verdict certainly isn't in. We may not be the best in the country, but I don't know who is right now."

He said Oklahoma might be better than the Huskers. "We'll find that out," he added. "Ohio State may be better and we probably won't find out."

He said, "Judging by the way Ohio State played Indiana last week — using comparative scores, which don't mean a hill of beans — I couldn't justify voting for anybody ahead of us. I guess when anything is equal you favor your own people."

"The fact I voted that way doesn't mean we are the best team. We may be 10th, we may be 15th, we might be the best. I feel right now we are as deserving as anybody."

Osborne said NU coaches have not talked to the players about the ratings. "At this time, it doesn't make a whole lot of difference, but it's nice to be rated high enough to have a chance to be national champions," he said.

"The only thing that has any ultimate meaning is the last poll," he said. His main concern at the moment is with the direction the Huskers are going — whether they're getting better or worse. "I think the players are basically concerned about that, too."

Here's UPI Rating Board

Since Nebraska fans are very poll-conscious, here's the list of coaches who will eventually decide the mythical national championship:

East: Joe Yukica, Boston College; Carmen Cozza, Yale; George Welsh, Navy; Johnny Majors, Pittsburgh; Bobby Bowden, West Virginia; Jerry Claiborne, Maryland.

Midwest: Alex Agase, Purdue; Bo Schembechler, Michigan; Bob Blackman, Illinois; Bill Hess, Ohio U.; Dan Devine, Notre Dame; Woody Hayes, Ohio State.

South: Bear Bryant, Alabama; Vince Dooley, Georgia; Bill Dooley, North Carolina; Doug Ricketts, Florida; Jim Carlen, South Carolina; Bill Battle, Tennessee.

Midlands: Al Onofrio, Missouri; Tom Osborne, Nebraska; Hayden Fry, North Texas State; Barry Switzer, Oklahoma; Earle Bruce, Iowa St.; F.A. Dry, Tulsa.

Southwest: Darrell Royal, Texas; Frank Broyles, Arkansas; Bill Yeoman, Houston; Charlie McClendon, LSU; Benny Ellender, Tulane; Grant Teaff, Baylor.

Mountains: Frank Kush, Arizona State; Ben Martin, Air Force; Jim Bradley, New Mexico State; Lavell Edwards, Brigham Young; Bill Mallory, Colorado; Jim Young, Arizona.

Pacific: John McKay, Southern California; Dee Andros, Oregon State; Jim Sweeney, Washington State; Darryl Rogers, San Jose State; Mike White, California; Dick Vermell, UCLA.

Catching Up On Football

Nebraska is rated a 24-point favorite over Kansas State by Harrah's Reno-Tahoe Racebook. Other Big Eight games: Missouri, 5 over Iowa State; Oklahoma, 25 over Kansas; Colorado, 5 over Oklahoma State.

In games involving top-ranked teams, the line looks like this: Ohio State, 24 over Illinois; Texas A&M, 21 over SMU; Alabama, 18 over LSU; Michigan, 24 over Purdue; Texas, 19 over Baylor; Penn State, 12 over North Carolina State; Southern California, 11 over Stanford; Florida, 10 over Georgia.

Nebraska's defensive unit has thrown opposing runners for losses 67 times in eight games, more than last year's team had in 12 games. A year ago, the total yardage in losses was 275 while this season's figure is 230.

Husker quarterback Vince Ferragamo's passing statistics the last three games show he has completed 26 of 43, with no interceptions, for 394 yards and seven touchdowns. That's a .604 completion average. Additionally he has rushed for 49 yards.

Before last Saturday's Oklahoma victory over Oklahoma State, OU defensive coordinator Larry Laceywell said Cowpoke center Gary Chlouber is the most underrated center in America. Head coach Barry Switzer, standing nearby, chimed in: "He's the best center in the Big Eight." How about that, Huskers?

Interesting statistics: Notre Dame had just six first downs against Southern California two weeks ago, and just six against Navy last Saturday. No wonder Irish fans are unhappy with Dan Devine.

Award No Surprise To Orioles' Palmer

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Jim Palmer of the Baltimore Orioles said Tuesday he wasn't at all surprised at winning the American League's Cy Young Award for the second time in three years, but he felt he could have had an even better season with a more potent offense behind him.

The 30-year-old right-hander was an easy winner in the voting conducted by 24 members of the Baseball Writers Association of America as he received 15 first place votes to outdistance Jim "Catfish" Hunter of the New York Yankees. Palmer received 98 points and was the only pitcher named on all 24 ballots.

Palmer said he was not surprised by the award and even stayed close to home Tuesday to await a phone call confirming his selection.

Palmer is the first American League pitcher to win the award twice outright. Detroit's Denny McLain won in 1968 and 1969 but was forced to share the 1969 honor with Baltimore's Mike Cuellar.

In the National League, former Dodger great Sandy Koufax earned the trophy three times and Bob Gibson and Tom Seaver were selected twice.

"It's very pleasant. I felt I was going to win all the time but I suppose you can't always tell when your competitor is an athlete from New York," he said, referring to Hunter.

Nebraska Remains Third In Polls

From News Wires

Ohio State, Oklahoma and Nebraska remained 1-2-3 in both the Associated Press and United Press International wire service college football polls Tuesday.

The three teams are way ahead of any other club in the eyes of the pollsters with Nebraska comfortably leading fourth-rated Texas A&M in both listings.

The Cornhuskers gained ground in the ratings, picking up four first place votes in the AP listing and two in the UPI poll. That gives NU six AP first-place ballots and four in the UPI chart voted on by the coaches.

The Cornhuskers' point total increased also, from 939 to 1056 in the AP listing and 528 to 349 in the UPI chart.
NU is now only 17 points behind Oklahoma in the UPI poll (as opposed to 36 last week) and 81 behind the Sooners in the AP poll (as opposed to 145 last week).

Oklahoma also gained, with four UPI first-place ballots and 19 AP votes as opposed to three and eight last week.

Although Ohio State lost several first place votes, the Buckeyes' leading point totals remained nearly the same. Ohio State has 409 UPI points this week as opposed to 413 last week and lost only two points, from 1190 to 1188 in the AP balloting.

The Big Eight Conference, which at one time had six clubs ranked in the top 20, has only two teams listed in the UPI poll. Associated Press, however, includes two other teams, Colorado (14th) and Missouri (19th).

LONG-TIME FRIENDS

TOM DOGGETT (35)

PAT FULLER (14)

Early Friendship Helps Pius X

By CHUCK SINCLAIR

Prep Sports Writer

The friendship of Tom Doggett and Pat Fuller goes back a long ways, and you can bet that pleases Lincoln Pius X football coach Vince Aldrich.

Because of the lasting friendship between Fuller and Doggett, Aldrich coaches a halfback whose statistics rank near the best in the state, and a quarterback whose credentials aren't far behind.

But had the two not been so close, Aldrich may have had two outstanding athletes battling for the same position.

Playing midget football for Security Mutual in junior high days, Doggett, as a quarterback, led the team to the state championship with Fuller at halfback.

Roles Reversed

Now, with the roles reversed, Fuller is directing the backfield of the top-rated Pius X Thunderbolts in a quest for the first state championship played under the football playoff system.

State titles aren't new for Fuller and Doggett as both were members of last year's mythical state championship team, and members of the sophomore team when Pius X won the title in 1973.

But their positions were new when they entered the ninth grade program at Pius.

"We got together and kind of decided to switch positions for freshman ball," Fuller says. "Actually, I knew if Tom was planning on playing halfback, he might take my position, so I looked for somewhere else to play."

"There weren't many guys planning to play quarterback, so that's what I decided on," Fuller adds.

Early Start

Being together since their freshman year at Pius didn't hurt the two either, and most of the other seniors played together on the sophomore team that won the city title two years ago over the likes of East, Northeast, Southeast and Lincoln High.

"Playing together since we were all sophomores, we've got the confidence we need in each other," Fuller says of the team scheduled to face Hartington Cedar Catholic in the semifinals Friday at 1:30 p.m. on the Wayne State College football field.

"The only thing any of us are thinking right now is state championship."

Aldrich is thinking state championship also, and he figures Fuller and Doggett are in the right position to accomplish it.

"I've been pretty sure of Pat all along," Aldrich says of the senior who took over the reins from last year's leader Mitch Ohnoutka. "I do call quite a few of the plays, but Pat will change to something else in the huddle if he thinks it's better."

"I don't think anybody in this group questions Pat when he changes a call," Aldrich adds. "He knows what he's doing."

Fuller's own statistics like Doggett's, show he indeed does know what to do.

He's averaging more than 100 yards through the air per game at well over a 50% completion rate (41-77), including nine touchdowns while Doggett has already surpassed the 1,000 yard rushing mark in just eight games.

Option Added

Like Doggett, Fuller can run with the ball and has added another dimension to the Pius offense, the option.

"He's a much better option quarterback than most people give him credit for," Aldrich notes. "We didn't run the option hardly at all last year because Mitch didn't have Pat's speed."

From a passing standpoint, Aldrich and Fuller credit a much used spread formation as a sophomore for his success. "It wasn't unusual for Pat to be 18 of 24 in sophomore ball," Aldrich says. "They threw the ball a lot more than we do now. They ran out of the spread formation more than any other one."

Fuller liked the wide-open style of sophomore ball, but is content with the varsity brand. "We can actually run any of those spread plays out of our formations," Fuller says.

Aldrich hints that the spread is still part of the system for use when it's needed.

To go with any championship contest, there's pressure. But Aldrich, Fuller and the rest of the team feel they've come face to face with pressure and whipped it earlier.

"We won't be in any worse pressure situation than we were with York or Beatrice," Aldrich says. "That was pressure."

"The York game (a 28-26 comeback win) did have pressure," Fuller adds. "But we really didn't realize it until afterwards."

Osborne Expects Hatcher At Helm

By BOB OWENS

Star Sports Editor

Despite the apparent critical quarterback situation at Kansas State, Nebraska football coach Tom Osborne says he expects regular Joe Hatcher to be at the controls when the Cornhuskers and Wildcats start the game Saturday in Manhattan, Kan.

Hatcher has had bruised ribs and a swollen ankle, but was able to play last Saturday against Kansas.

"We've already gone against an unknown quality and he darn near beat us," Osborne said, referring to the play of Scott Burk, who started for Oklahoma State against the Huskers and barely lost, 28-20.

Osborne said he felt the Huskers "were paying attention to what they were doing" in Tuesday's practice. "I think we'll be ready and will play a good game."

The Huskers worked for about two hours in pads and Osborne said most all of the injured players appear nearing condition that will enable them to play against K-State.

Middle guard John Lee missed the workout because of a stomach disorder, but should be back Wednesday.

Steve Lindquist, star of the special teams who missed the Missouri game because of a jammed neck and a muscle pull, is wearing a neck harness and was moving better even though he's not quite full speed.

Center Rik Bonness is nursing a muscle injury, but was able to practice and both defensive end Dave Redding and tight end Larry Mushinski appear recovered from injuries that kept them out of last week's game at Missouri.

Osborne said safetyman Jimmy Burrow is the best he has seen all season and now is catching punts. Burrow had been wearing a cast on his right hand because of a small break suffered early in the season.

No Changes

The Huskers plan no change, however, on punt returns.

Jimmy Burrow
Catching Punts Again

Joe Hatcher
K-State Quarterback

keeping Dave Butterfield as the deep man. Burrow, who was a returner last season, now is available for use as the up-back on returns.

Osborne said Tom Heiser will start again at wingback, but that he and Curtis Craig will go about half-and-half at the position. He said this is no reflection on Craig, who has been playing pretty well, but that NU usually stays with a starter if he's playing well.

Craig missed some work recently with a bruised knee, but now is 100 per cent.

Discussing K-State, the Husker coach said injuries there have been mostly to offensive people. "Defensively, they really haven't lost people," he said. "They're about as healthy as ever and they've done a good job stopping people. Nobody has run all over them, but Missouri and Kansas have moved the ball better on them the last two games."

"Defensively they're better than Indiana and TCU, and they rank in there pretty well with one or two of the defensive teams we've played in the Big Eight."

KSU Report

At Manhattan, Kansas State coach Ellis Rainsberger says he isn't going to add anything to the game against Nebraska.

"Nebraska is so experienced I think any new adjustment we could make might hurt us more than it would help," he said. "We just have to do what we've been doing and try to get better at it."

Rainsberger said his defense looked sharp in Tuesday's 90-minute workout, but he knows Nebraska presents a lot of problems defensively.

"You have to zero in on the run against them, but you also have to watch the passing game," he added. They don't throw a lot but when they do they do it well."

Winter Statistics Not Intimidating

By RANDY YORK

Prep Sports Editor

Mark Winter's statistics don't show it. But then, what kind of statistics are there for intimidation?

Winter is a 6-3, 240-pound senior offensive and defensive tackle for Waverly's third-ranked Class B football team, which plays fourth-ranked Kumball in the state playoffs Friday afternoon at Nebraska Wesleyan.

"We've kind of frowned on Mark's statistics this season (13 solo tackles and 20 assists in nine games). But that's not really fair to him," Waverly coach Randy Hash says of Winter.

"Really, Mark influences our opponents more than anyone else," Hash points out. "With him on that left side of the line, opponents have chosen to run almost completely away from him."

Consequently, 6-3, 200-pound junior right defensive tackle Corey Eckert has almost doubled Winter's statistics. He has 29 solos and 27 assists.

Winter, who lives in Eagle, is a younger brother of Wally Winter, former Lincoln Northeast two-sport all-stater who started at offensive tackle for Nebraska.

Mark also has his sights on college football. At least two other Waverly seniors, Myron Leibel and Rod Wismer, have the same goals.

Wismer is Waverly's strongest all-state candidate at linebacker. "He's quick, aggressive and always around the football," notes Hash. "He leads our team with 40 solos, 49 assists, two interceptions and a fumble recovery."

Leibel, a 5-9, 160-pound monster, "has a lot of football savvy, too," according to Hash. "Like Rod, he runs .048 in the 40 and really likes to hit."

"I wouldn't be surprised if both Wismer and Leibel try to walk on at the university," Hash says. "They both really love the game. Wismer (6-2, 190) might be a prospect if he was a little bigger."

Both are three-year starters.

Leibel was also Waverly's starting quarterback until he broke a thumb in the second quarter of the Auburn game and was forced to the sidelines the last two games.

"He gets the cast off his right hand Wednesday, so we're looking for him to start on defense against Kumball," Hash points out. "I don't think he'll be ready to return to quarterback yet."

Dan Hill, a 5-8, 150-pound senior I-back, is Waverly's leading scorer this season with 60 points on nine touchdowns and three conversions. He rushed 184 times for 907 yards for a 4.9 per carry average.

"He's also our leading receiver and runs back punts and kickoffs," Hash notes. "Dan is very quick and awfully tough for a 150-pounder."

Hash is convinced "this year's team is the strongest defensive team we've had at Waverly. We've allowed only 43 points or 4.7 a game."

"Our opponents have rushed for only 435 yards in nine games," he adds. "It figures out to 1.4 yards per rush. Our opponents have thrown 179 times, completing 57 for 31.8 per cent. We've picked off 19 passes."

Junior linebacker Randy Wilhelm joins Wismer, Winter, Eckert and Leibel as standout Viking defenders.

Hash believes we've come a long way offensively in our last five games. Super defense kept us going the first of the season. But with the way we've improved offensively, it's going to take a darn good club to beat us."

"There's no doubt in my mind, we're close to Lincoln Pius," Hash declares. "There's no way we're looking past Kumball, but we'd sure like that chance to play Pius."

THE PADDOCK

Another Long Session?

Henry Brandt knows he may answer many questions Wednesday and Thursday in Omaha.

That's when the Nebraska State Racing Commission will hold its annual two-day fall meetings. Unlike past years when the assigning of next year's dates was the major item, this year's agenda may well be a discussion of Lincoln racing.

The Lincoln meet will be divided between Ak-Sar-Ben in Omaha (15 days) and Columbus (10 days) next year while the new grandstand is being constructed at the State Fairgrounds. But the real question is will cheaper horses be allowed to run at Ak-Sar-Ben's Lincoln meet?

"We've got to go with the horses that are already in Omaha," noted Brandt, State Fairgrounds' general manager. "Naturally, if some of the horses leave after the regular Omaha meet ends, we'll let others in."

"But there's no way we're going to run $1,000 claimers for $3,000 pots," he added. "We'll have to wait and see what happens."

At the risk of angering my "pen pals," let's examine what Brandt says and understand that you just can't suddenly tell horsemen who have been at Omaha for 11 weeks to leave so $1,500 claimers can enter.

To run a race meet — even one which will be divided into two separate sponsorships — you need continuity. It's not good business to evict tenants who have been with you for 11 weeks to let in others for 15 days.

Sound Decision

Brandt has an obligation to permit horsemen who have run in Lincoln for decades stalls at the Omaha meet. But that doesn't mean progress has to be stopped.

The Lincoln races need higher quality horses — whether they are owned by persons from Denver or Lincoln. I've always maintained that if everything else is equal then the Nebraska horseman should have preference over one from outside the state.

But you can't live in the past. That's something that neither Ak-Sar-Ben general manager Dick Becker nor Brandt want with next year's temporary situation.

We realize it puts a strain on certain Nebraska horsemen who need the Lincoln meet to make ends meet financially. That doesn't mean, however, that you can entirely alter the structure of a race meet by exchanging 1,200 horses for 15 days. It's just not feasible.

Brandt's comment of Sunday racing: "I don't think we'll have it in the near future in Lincoln. Atokad (where Sunday racing made its start in Nebraska this season) is still not handling as much money on Sunday as Saturday. I'm not interested in it. Maybe we'll see it down the line, but I'm not interested in it now."

Brandt on the new grandstand: "The old building's all gone. We started building the new one two days after we tore the old one down. The plunks are almost done. The foundation's in for the paddock."

THINGS WE'D LIKE TO SEE AT THIS WEEK'S OMAHA RACING MEETING — Finally getting the new Nebraska Rules of Racing finished. With all the additions, changes and corrections since the last one in 1970, it's almost like musical chairs trying to decipher what's new and old. Less redundancy in discussing matters. It doesn't take two hours to say something that could be said in two minutes.

BIG 8 REPORT

Oklahoma
NORMAN, Okla. (AP)—Oklahoma's injury report sounded like a squad roster call after the Sooners' practice Tuesday.

Oklahoma is still without the services of split end Billy Brooks, and fullbacks Jim Littrell and Horace Ivory are also hampered with nagging injuries.

"I'm disappointed we didn't get Billy Brooks back to practice today," said coach Barry Switzer. "It doesn't look like he'll be able to make it this week either. He couldn't even run today."

Littrell and Ivory were practicing, but both were slowed by nagging ankle injuries.

A newcomer to the Sooners' wounded list was strongside linebacker Bill Dalke, who twisted an ankle against Oklahoma State last Saturday.

He sat out Tuesday's drills and Switzer said his availability for Saturday's clash against Kansas was a question mark.

Tight end Victor Hicks, who also was decked against the Cowboys, is still in the infirmary suffering from headaches.

The Sooners injury report wasn't Switzer's only disappointment Tuesday.

"We didn't practice as well today as we did last week," he said. "We'll have to play well Saturday. I've watched some Kansas film and their wishbone can give you problems."

Missouri
COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP)—Coach Al Onofrio shortened practice Tuesday for the Missouri football team as the Tigers prepared for Saturday's game at Iowa State.

"We start to cut down at this time of year because there's just not that much we can accomplish," said Onofrio.

He said he doubted fullback John Blakeman would be ready Saturday after suffering a knee strain against Nebraska. Freshman Rich Dansville is at No. 1 fullback with Bill Marx backing him up.

Defensive tackle Keith Morrissey will miss the Cyclone game because of stretched knee ligaments. Tom Cooper is to start in his place.

Kansas
LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP)—With eight players on the injured list, Kansas Coach Bud Moore is not optimistic about the fortunes of the Jayhawks when they play second-ranked Oklahoma in Norman Saturday.

Although pleased with the players who worked out Tuesday, Moore said not enough of them were there to accomplish what was necessary to beat the Sooners.

Defensive tackle Mike Butler's has a dislocated knee cap and Moore it could keep him out indefinitely.

Sophomore Paul Margheim, who was KU's defensive player of the week following the Kansas State game, will probably start in Butler's place, the coach said.

Oklahoma State
STILLWATER, Okla. (AP)—The Oklahoma State Cowboys went through what coaches said was a "real good practice" in a downpour of rain Tuesday.

Asked if the rain hampered Tuesday's football drills, head coach Jim Stanley replied: "On the contrary, it didn't bother us at all. It was a fine practice."

Stanley said, however, it was doubtful that offensive guard backup Robert Ringwall and strong safety Joe Avanzini will be able to play in Saturday's clash at Colorado.

"Ringwall sprained a knee against Oklahoma and Avanzini hurt his back, but it wasn't related to his disc surgery of last year," the Cowboy coach explained.

Sophomore Jerry Cramer is set to replace Avanzini while Ron Baker is the probable replacement for Ringwall. They will back up starters Derrell Goforth and Jim Ledford.

Freshman running back Chipp Latham, who returned a punt 66 yards for a touchdown against North Texas State earlier this year, will be out "at least a week," according to Stanley. Latham injured a knee in the Cowboy junior varsity game against Oklahoma Monday night in Norman.

Iowa State
AMES, Iowa (AP)—Iowa State concentrated on sharpening its pass defense game during a two-hour drill Tuesday as the Cyclones prepared for Saturday's Big Eight Conference meeting with 19th-rated Missouri.

"We worked hard on pass defense," said Coach Earle Bruce. Steve Pisarkiewicz is an outstanding passing threat and he has an excellent receiver in Henry Marshall.

"You also have to have great respect for Missouri's ground game and those two running backs — Tony Galbreath and Curtis Brown."

Bruce expects to regain the services of middle guard Maynard Stensrud who missed the last two games with a broken hand.

Regular quarterback Buddy Hardeman, forced to the sidelines midway through last Saturday's 28-27 loss to Colorado when he re-injured his broke left wrist, was also expected to see action Saturday.

Wooden Set For Cage Clinic
Kearney — John Wooden, former UCLA basketball coach, will highlight Thursday's sixth annual Kearney State Cage Clinic.

Wooden will visit with coaches at the evening meal before his 8 p.m. address in Cushing Coliseum.

Four Nebraska coaches will headline the day-long event. Ken Trubey of Ord will open the sessions after 9:30 a.m. registration at the Ft. Kearney Inn. Don Kelley of Lincoln Plus X, John Johnette, Omaha Burke and Geneva's Larry Westerbuhr will round out the coaches clinic.

Officials, Students 'Insulted' By ABC-TV
COLUMBIA, Mo. (UPI)—University of Missouri officials, student leaders and football fans have objected to what they say was an ABC Television Sports portrayal of Old Missouri as a school of parties and drinking.

The object of the protests was a short feature story during the halftime of the Nebraska-Missouri football game last Saturday. It included extensive films of students drinking at a local bar.

Robert Kren, director of the office of public information, said he expressed the objection to ABC Sports Producer Chuck Howard.

"I expressed our concern. There's a view by the network that they were putting on a football show. They were not aware of our sensitivities," Kren said.

In the halftime feature, ABC sports announcer Jim Lampley asked a coed, "What do you do out here, 150 miles from nowhere, when the football season's over?"

She replied: "We just live for football, nothing else is important, classes or anything else. We just live for Friday when we start to party and get ready for the game."

Asked what coeds do after football season, she said "We date the football players."

Carrie Francke, president of the students association, protested in a telegram to Howard, and the daily newspaper in Jefferson City, the Missouri capital 30 miles from Columbia, denounced the film feature in an editorial.

Missouri Athletic Director Mel Sheehan said no protests were planned by the football team, which has been televised three times on ABC this season. "There's no practicality to it," he said.

Howard, replying to Ms. Francke in a telegram, said ABC did not insult the school.

"What was attempted was to portray an honest assessment of the importance of intercollegiate football to the undergraduate student body of the University of Missouri. I'm sorry if the segment offended any members of what is a first class university," Howard said.

Meanwhile, Ms. Francke said the Students Association plans to continue an effort to persuade the university's administration to allow drinking on campus.

Midland Offense Top Rated

Hastings and Wayne continue to be ranked in national NAIA statistics. Chadron's Duane Fritz is still in the top five in punting and Hastings' Red Schultz continues to throw for more than 200 yards per game.

Wayne continues to lead in total defense and in rushing defense while Concordia leads in pass defense. On offense, Midland leads in total yards and in rushing yards while Hastings is far ahead in passing.

In individual races, Schultz has almost a 2-1 margin in passing over his closest competitor; and Dexter Brown of Midland has a 3 touchdown lead in scoring. It would appear that no runner will gain 1,000 yards this fall.

Terry Kunz Gains Honor

Big Eight Honor To Kunz

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Iowa State Coach Earle Bruce said Monday Colorado's Terry Kunz "ran the ball pretty well against us."

"Pretty well" may have been putting it mildly.

The bruising Buff fullback ran 25 times for 167 yards and three touchdowns and was a major factor in Colorado's uphill 28-27 victory Saturday over the Cyclones.

Kunz's display of power earned him Big Eight Conference offensive player of the week honors. His selection by a panel of sports writers was unanimous.

Kunz, who also caught a nine-yard pass, scored twice on runs of one yard and a third time on a two-yard burst.

"It was his best game of the year," said Colorado Coach Bill Mallory. "He really was effective."

Also nominated were Nolan Cromwell of Kansas, Vince Ferragamo of Nebraska, Joe Washington of Oklahoma, Jim Wingender of Iowa State and Gary Chlouber of Oklahoma State.

Leroy Selmon of Oklahoma was unanimously selected the league's defensive player of the week for his performance in the Sooners' 27-7 triumph over Oklahoma State.

Selmon was credited with 18 tackles, one for a two-yard loss, and caused two fumbles which set up two of the Sooners' touchdowns.

Model Of Skis Important To Would-Be Purchaser

By HARVEY DUCK
(c) 1975 Chicago Daily News

Purchasing a new pair of skis this season may be like an adventure into the unknown. With a variety of manufacturers offering a choice of models, lengths and characteristics, an unwary would-be purchaser may find himself becoming more confused as he hops.

The first step a person should take, before beginning a shopping tour, is to determine what type of ski he needs. Should it be for comfortable recreation skiing, or should it be an aggressive recreational model? Or will it be for racing or for freestyle and high speed performance over moguls and through powder?

Major manufacturers offer models produced precisely for the various types of performances, unlike the "old" days when skis were often used in more versatile fashion.

Here is a recommended shopping guide for new ski purchases:

Recreational Models

Most are more versatile than skis constructed for other purposes. They are usually easy to turn and can serve beginner, intermediate and expert. They don't, for the most part, demand as strong concentration as other designs.

Some of the more popular makes include Elan, Lange, Rossignol, Sarnier, Spalding and Volkl. Lengths will run from 150 to 180 centimeters and will feature even flex, gentle edging, fairly stiff tails, and tend to be on the wide side.

Aggressive Recreational

These are designed primarily for the faster fun-seeker, but not for the dedicated racer or hot shot. They stress softness yet are stiff enough to hold an edge on ice and allow fast running without excess chatter. Most will perform well under a range of conditions — bumps, powder, hardpack and ice. They will turn easily at high and low speeds.

More popular models will come from Century, Durafiber, K2, Molnar and Trucker. Lengths will be in the 175-205 range and be slightly softer than the pure racing models. Emphasis will be on strength and versatility.

Racing

Although designed for the regular racer, these skis can also be comfortably used under hardpacked and icy conditions by a strong intermediate. They feature balanced construction and tend to be on the stiff side with even flex. They're strong, quick and easy to turn and will bite hard into the toughest surfaces.

The extra-engineering that goes into such models makes them more expensive than the pure recreational ski with prices in the $200 to $250 range. Among the better models are Blizzard, Dynamic, Dynastar, Kastle, Olin and Rossignol.

Freestyle

Solid construction to cope with the abrupt strains encountered in freestyle is the number one consideration. The ski must be stable, yet be able to react quickly and smoothly. Reliable edging is also important.

Skis are on the short side (120-180 cm) and prices in the $150-$180 range. Most are on the stiff side but flex and balance will vary depending upon the type of performance (ballet, aerial or freestyle). Speed characteristics are not emphasized as much as ability to cope with moguls, ice and powder.

Leading performers will be Atomic, Fischer, Hart, Head, Kazama and Kneissel.

Race Meeting Set Wednesday
Omaha — The Nebraska State Racing Commission will hold its annual two-day fall meetings here Wednesday and Thursday at the New Tower Hotel.

Wednesday's meeting includes numerous rule change considerations for the Nebraska Rules of Racing and other recommendations which are intended to increase the Commission's distribution of aid to the 93 Nebraska counties.

Tack shop operator Jerry Gitter will have a hearing concerning the Nebraska dog rule.

The Thursday session includes meetings with the managers of the five Nebraska thoroughbred race tracks (Fonner Park, Ak-Sar-Ben, Lincoln, Columbus and Atokad Park) and with the quarter horse managers from Broken Bow.

Barbee In Hospital
Nebraska Game and Parks Commission director Willard Barbee remains in intensive care at Bryan Memorial Hospital after being admitted late last week with chest pains.

The 60-year-old director will remain in intensive care even though his blood pressure has stabilized, a commission spokesman said Tuesday. A lengthy hospital recuperation stay is anticipated.

In Barbee's absence, assistants Bill Bailey (game) and Dale Bree (parks) will carry on the duties of the director.

Muncie Named
SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—University of California running back Chuck Muncie, who led the Bears to a 28-14 upset over Ricky Bell and the USC Trojans, today was named Pacific-8 conference Player of the Week.

Muncie rushed 18 times for 143 yards and a 7.9 yard average. He also caught five passes for 62 more yards.

York, Albion Playoff Set For Wednesday
York, No. 2-ranked Class B school, will take on Albion Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at Albion in the Central 10 playoffs. Albion is ninth-ranked in Class B.

The game highlights a busy schedule of conference playoffs this week. Other games include: Husker Conference — Oakland-Craig at Wayne Wednesday, 7:30 p.m.; Southern Nebraska — Wymore Southern vs. Fairfield Sandy Creek, Thursday at Wymore, 1:30 p.m.; Goldenrod — Claris at Genoa, Thursday, 7:30 p.m.; Rangeland — Valentine at Gordon, Saturday, 1:30 p.m.; Central 10 — York at Albion, Wednesday, 7:30 p.m.; Republican Valley — Alma at Cambridge, Thursday, 2 p.m.; Homestead — Dawson Vardon at Osgood, Wednesday, 7:30 p.m.; Mid-State — Norfolk Catholic at Battle Creek, Thursday, 7:30 p.m.; Twin Rivers — Falls City at Blair, Wednesday, 7:30 p.m.; Loup Valley — Arnold at Ansley, Thursday, 1:30 p.m.; Pioneer — Shickley at Fairmont, Wednesday, 7:30 p.m.; Big 10 — Fremont at Kearney, Thursday, 1:30 p.m.

When Nebraska's first state-wide prep play-offs get underway this Friday, the Journal and Star sports team will be there.

Randy York will cover both Class A play-offs — Grand Island vs. East at Seacrest Field, 1:30 p.m., and Bellevue vs. Westside at UNO, 7:30 p.m.

Bring you the action from Class B's Lincoln Plus v. Hartington C.C. will be Chuck Smider. Dave Stittler will report on the Waverly v. Kimball clash at Nebraska Wesleyan.

In Class C-1, Ken Hambleton will cover Plainview v. Uka Centennial at Waco. Tom Vint will travel to Kearney State to report on Wahoo Neumann v. Gibbon.

Plus, special coverage is planned at each of the other six games in the play-off system.

It all adds up to a lot of football and a lot of man hours on the part of the sports team in Nebraska.

We have it covered.

Suspect Held In Omaha Robbery

Omaha (UPI) — The FBI said Tuesday the identity of the remaining two gunmen who robbed an Omaha bank of $15,000 was uncertain, and there were no "real good clues" to aid in the probe.

Edward Krupinsky, special agent in charge of Iowa and Nebraska, commented following the appearance of John Stanley Davis Jr., 26, of Omaha, before U.S. Magistrate Richard C. Peck.

Davis was arrested Monday night by an Iowa highway patrolman for an alleged speeding violation on I-29 north of Onawa, Iowa. He appeared before Peck on charges of bank robbery and using a weapon in commission of the bank robbery.

Krupinsky said the car Davis was driving had Colorado license plates and "right now we are attempting to see what significance, if any, that might have with the other two suspects."

"We are also checking around the Omaha area," Krupinsky said, "to question friends and associates of Mr. Davis. But as far as any actual real good clues, no we don't have any."

"We still don't know who the other people are," Krupinsky said.

Authorities said three men, armed with handguns including an automatic pistol and a revolver, robbed the Grover Plaza branch of the Omaha National Bank shortly before it closed Monday night.

The Iowa patrolman who arrested Davis, Gary Swanson of Sioux City, Iowa, said he found $5,000 in cash on the front seat of the car Davis was driving. Swanson said he received a citizen's band radio report from two truckers that a man was driving a car erratically and might be intoxicated.

Swanson said several liquor bottles were found in the car along with the money. At the time, Swanson said he was unaware of the Omaha robbery and learned of it after Davis was brought in for questioning.

No injuries were reported, but authorities said one of the robber's guns apparently discharged accidentally with the bullet lodging in the bank's ceiling.

Authorities said the three men wore nylon stocking masks and forced the bank manager into another room. The tellers were ordered to lie on the floor. The money was taken from cash drawers.

On Oct. 16, a gunman robbed the bank of $27,000, but a suspect was arrested in nearby Bellevue the same night and the money was recovered that night and later the next day.

The three suspects Monday night fled in a car parked in front of the bank.

Davis was ordered held in lieu of $25,000 bond, and his preliminary hearing was set for Monday.

Probe Continues In Shootings

Omaha (AP) — The Douglas County sheriff's office continued an investigation Tuesday into the third fatal shooting of men in an area just west of Omaha, all wounded in the head with small caliber bullets.

The latest victim was identified as Jerry V. Agard, 55, of Bullhead, S. D. His body was found west of Omaha Monday by two men cutting wood.

Police said Agard had been around Omaha for some time but had no permanent address.

Deputy County Attorney Sam Cooper said Agard had been shot in the left side of the head. The official said the man apparently had been beaten on the head before he was shot.

Cooper said the man had been killed no more than 24 hours before the body was found. An autopsy was scheduled.

Cooper said there was no apparent connection between Agard's death and the slaying of Omaha real estate man Ronald J. Abboud, whose body was found Sunday west of Omaha.

A construction worker from Crescent, Iowa—Hendrick T. Dohmen Jr., 33—died about a week after he was shot early Oct. 12 as he drove along West Dodge Road.

other in the middle of the back. Abboud's body was found Sunday in a creek bed west of Omaha. Keenan said Abboud, who had been missing since Wednesday, had been dead from two to five days.

The sheriff's office sought for questioning a man with whom Abboud was to have viewed land west of Omaha the day he disappeared.

Omahan Gets 7 Years In Death

Omaha (AP) — A 21-year-old Omaha man was sentenced to seven years in the Nebraska Penal Complex Tuesday for firing a shot through an apartment window Sept. 28, that killed Deborah Ann Carter, 18.

the incident "to me or to himself."

The shooting occurred shortly before 10 p.m. during a birthday for Miss Carter's roommate.

Carter, who is unrelated to the victim, said his act was not premeditated, to which Grant replied. "That's why its not first degree. But she's just as dead."

The judge said that in determining the sentence, he took into account that Carter showed some measure of contrition about the incident and pleaded guilty to manslaughter Oct. 15.

Grant also sentenced Carter to three to five years in prison for burglarizing a downtown Omaha restaurant.

Carter was arrested the morning following the shooting and charged with that burglary and charged a week later in connection with Miss Carter's death.

Charge Against Yee Reduced

Omaha (UPI) — An Omaha man arrested near Onawa, Iowa, by an Iowa highway patrolman who found $5,000 in cash on the front seat of the man's car has been charged in connection with a $15,000 holdup at the Grover Plaza Branch of the Omaha National Bank, the FBI said.

The suspect, John Stanley Davis Jr., 26, was taken before U.S. Magistrate Richard C. Peck where bond was set at $25,000. Davis was remanded to the Douglas County Jail.

Daniel Wherry, U.S. attorney for Nebraska, said Davis faced two charges, bank robbery and using a weapon in the commission of a bank robbery. A preliminary hearing was set for Nov. 10.

The FBI said Davis was initially stopped for speeding on Interstate 29 north of Onawa.

Thieves Abandon Stolen Grain

Dawson (AP) — Authorities said an attempted grain theft aborted due to a series of misfortunes, including the thieves abandoning their semi-trailer truck at the Dawson Elevator.

It started Sunday morning when Jim Balke Jr., 18, son of the elevator operator, noticed a group of men loading corn at the elevator as he drove past.

Balke told his father, who notified the sheriff's office at Falls City 20 miles away.

Apparently one of the would-be thieves saw the younger Balke and attempts were made to hurry the theft and escape.

The semi was inside the elevator runway and a door at the entrance came off, forcing the truck to pull through the elevator rather than backing out. Some corn dumped behind the truck also blocked a backward exit.

Then the thieves failed to raise the unloading hoist, which was run over by the truck, causing a fire to blow. The semi was unable to negotiate a turn, knocked a shed from its foundation and that structure collapsed into a smaller grain bin.

Officers said that broke a 1,000-gallon propane tank, and the burglars then fled on foot.

Authorities found the truck containing more than 1,000 bushels of corn valued at $2,500 to $3,000. Damage to the elevator was estimated at $6,000 to $8,000.

Officials said the tractor-trailer rig was registered under different names in Oklahoma and Arkansas.

The Richardson County sheriff's office, State Patrol and FBI were investigating.

No Details On Divis Drug Arrest

Wahoo (AP) — Deputy Saunders County Atty. Loren Lindahl said Tuesday details will be announced Thursday in a drug investigation involving Sheriff Joseph Divis.

Lindahl said Divis, 64, was arrested last Thursday night in Wahoo by plainclothes officers of the Nebraska State Patrol.

Lindahl said the arrest involved possession of marijuana. He declined to elaborate.

Yaunders County Atty. Curt Bromm said in Lincoln Tuesday, "I won't have anything to say on the case until Thursday."

Divis, a veteran law officer and former state fire marshal, was unavailable for comment and was reported by a deputy in his office to be conferring with an attorney in Omaha.

In Lincoln, Lt. Col. Elmer Kohmetscher of the State Patrol confirmed the arrest had been made and said the patrol was asked to assist in the case by Saunders County authorities.

Lindahl said the County Board met Monday to discuss the case, but County Clerk Charles Egr said no action was taken.

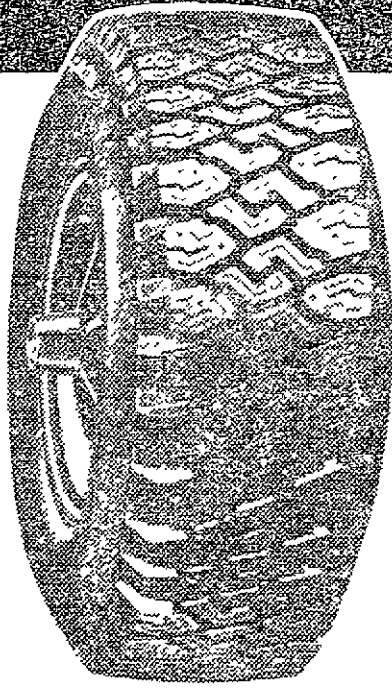

Egr said, "The board wants to wait and see what happens Thursday. The meeting was an informational meeting."

Divis, a Democrat, was re-elected to a second term last year despite another dispute with the County Board. Lindahl said the 1974 controversy involved the sheriff's handling of delinquent personal property taxes.

Kennerly Target Of Photographers

Des Moines (UPI) — President Ford's personal photographer was the target of both the cameras and questions of news photographers who gathered here Tuesday.

Official White House photographer David Hume Kennerly appeared in the National Press Photographers Association's flying short course in Des Moines, one of four stops in a nationwide NPPA tour.

Kennerly narrated a slide program of pictures he has taken during his job as Ford's photographic historian and praised Ford for giving him access to all levels of White House affairs, including top-level strategy conferences of presidential advisors and intimate moments in Ford's family life.

As an example of his unprecedented open access, he displayed pictures documenting Ford's tension during the Mayaguez incident, meeting with Soviet Communist Party chief Leonid Brezhnev in Vladivostok, and with First Lady Betty Ford after her surgery.

Kennerly also showed photographs taken during Ford's visit to Japan, photographs which he said had not been published "and probably never will be."

One picture showed senior U.S. officials attempting a game devised by the Japanese, where one person holds a straw between his nose and upper lip, then tries to pass the straw to someone else who has to grab it the same way.

Kennerly, who won the Pulitzer Prize for photography during the Vietnam war while based in Saigon with United Press International, told of his return to Southeast Asia earlier this year shortly before Saigon fell.

"I was really chomping at the bit to go," Kennerly said. "Especially since I already had spent two and a half years there."

With Ford's permission, Kennerly packed, then went upstairs to say good-bye to the President. "Only one thing," Kennerly told Ford, "I don't have any money."

So, Kennerly said, "the President dug down into his wallet and came up with $47." It was all the money Ford had at the time, but he dug a bit further and flipped Kennerly a quarter, adding, "Here, you might as well take my last two bits."

With that, Kennerly was off.

Teenager's Appearance Gets Condemnation Action

Omaha (UPI) — The Douglas County Board, after an appearance by a teenager overcome by smoke from a fire at King Lake, voted Tuesday to take emergency steps to condemn 10 buildings at King Lake.

Appearing before the board were John Johnson, a member of the King Lake Improvement Association, Cheryl Biscamp, and her mother, Mrs. Charles Biscamp.

Miss Biscamp was overcome by smoke last Tuesday, the same day the board rejected a proposal by Commissioner Michael Albert to take the emergency condemnation steps.

Miss Biscamp was attempting to prevent a grass fire from spreading to a condemned house, stopped breathing and was revived by mouth-to-mouth resuscitation from her mother and Johnson.

Board Chairman George Buglewicz said the board's unanimous reversal of its action last week should show King Lake residents that "we are tired of fooling around" about removal of dilapidated buildings.

Normal condemnation proceedings take from 90 to 120 days.

VAN OSDEL — Claire, Tecumseh, died Monday. Survivors: sister, Mrs. Ida Pfeiffer, Tecumseh.

Services: 1 p.m. Thursday, Wherry Mortuary, Tecumseh. Johnson Cemetery.

WAGNER — Anna, 74, Tecumseh, died Tuesday in Lincoln. Survivors: brothers, Charles, Paul, both of Tecumseh; sister, Mrs. Frieda Hahn, Syracuse.

Services: 10 a.m. Thursday, St. John's Lutheran Church, Tecumseh. Tecumseh Cemetery.

Bridgeport OKs School Addition

Bridgeport (AP) — Residents approved a $1.7 million school bond issue Tuesday by a vote of 586-to-256.

The vote cleared the way for additions to the Bridgeport elementary school building, including classrooms, a library and a media center.

Superior Nixes Liquor By Drink

Lincoln Star Special Superior — Voters here in a special election Tuesday soundly defeated a proposal for liquor-by-the-drink.

City Clerk Larry Whitney said the official tally was 212 for and 319 against the issue. The turnout of voters was described as small.

Crawford Bond Is Voted Down

Crawford (AP) — Voters have turned down a $450,000 school bond issue by a margin of 235-to-381.

If the bond issue had passed, the district's mill levy would have increased 22 mills and property taxes would have risen 42%.

Currents Change

Bogota, Colombia (UPI) — There are three different voltages in Bogota. Some homes get an electric current of 110 volts as in the United States, others of 220 volts as in Europe, and still others of 150 volts.

—Staying Ahead—

Cities Not Required To Reveal Finances

By JANE BRYANT QUINN
New York — Investors in municipal bonds may not realize it, but nothing in the securities laws requires governments that sell bonds to have their financial statements certified as correct.

Jane Bryant Quinn

A well-run state or city will keep good books as a matter of course. But if it's having trouble, it has much more freedom than a corporation to engage in cover-up accounting.

Investors have rarely bothered about a city's finances. Instead, they rely on the ratings given the bonds by Moody's and Standard & Poor's. But rating services work principally from whatever figures the city gives them, which helps explain why New York went to the brink of default while still rated "A". Until a few months ago, individual investors in New York notes and bonds had not the faintest idea of the city's truly desperate situation, and no way to learn of it.

It seems clear that the entire municipal-bond establishment — the banks, the rating services, the underwriters and dealers — have something to answer for with regard to their apparent ignorance of the fact that New York had run out of money. But states and cities with budget troubles also have a responsibility to keep their books in an honest and forthright manner, and to make their finances public. Full disclosure would have forced New York onto an austerity program years ago.

Here are some of the things that cities should probably be telling potential investors, according to William Moran, head of the New York office of the Securities and Exchange Commission. (These views, of course, are his and not those of the commission.)

1. Cities sometimes issue of-financial statements of financial condition around the time that they sell their bonds. But these statements usually reveal little; sometimes they're merely a mass of figures with little explanatory text. If they prefer, cities may issue no statements at all. There should be some requirement that fair disclosure be made to investors at the time of the offering.

2. Disclosure should cover such things as: the trend of the city's indebtedness — especially short-term debt, since that's what can hurt the most; how the interest on all outstanding bonds will be paid; the extent of the city's tax delinquency (New York, believe it or not, was issuing tax anticipation notes against real estate taxes it was unlikely to collect); whether there's deficit financing; and the trend of debt in relation to population, per-capita income and property values. Data like this would flag situations where expenses were rapidly outrunning revenues.

3. Better sense has to be made out of the accounting methods used by municipalities. Furthermore, if accounting systems are changed midstream, the reason for the change should be disclosed. This would restrain cities from switching funds from budget to budget to put a better face on things.

4. Buyers should be told what the city intends to do with the proceeds of an offering, and whether the present financing will do the job. There should be no way of concealing the fact that funds are being raised to cover chronic operating deficits.

5. City financial statements contain a formal disclaimer stating that neither the city nor the underwriter promises that the information given is correct. This misleads investors into thinking they have no recourse. However, under the fraud statutes, the city and its underwriters can indeed be called to account for material misstatements and omissions. Official statements should also reveal that the financial information has neither been certified nor reviewed for full and fair disclosure.

6. There should be a readable, non-technical description of default and what it would mean to the bondholder. For example, if the city can't be sued, or must be sued within a specific period of time, those facts should be set forth.

7. The city should periodically issue financial reports to investors, updating revenue projections and noting any change in financial circumstances. Without this, investors can't make sound decisions on whether to buy bonds in the secondary market, or even whether to continue holding the bonds they have.

These disclosures, besides benefiting investors, would put a clear restraint on any city tempted to kid the public. The relative freedom state and city politicians have to hoke the books can be nearly irresistible in time of financial trouble. Nothing short of federal laws on fair disclosure will save them from themselves.

Stock Market Recoups Part Of Its Loss

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market recouped a small part of Monday's loss with a cautious technical upswing in light trading Tuesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, down 10.32 on Monday, picked up 4.41 to 830.13.

Gainers outweighed losers 742 to 573 among the 1,819 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume limped along at 11.57 million shares, compared with Monday's five-week low of 11.40 million.

Trading was restrained Tuesday by the closing of many banks across the country for Election Day.

Brokers found no particular news event to account for the upturn. Instead, they said, it appeared that a leveling off trend at the opening brought in some short covering by investors taking profits on borrowed shares they had sold earlier.

There were also signs of tentative bargain hunting among recently depressed issues.

But it appeared the market's inability to gather any strong upward momentum reflected continued uncertainty over New York City's money problems and their prospective effects on the budding economic recovery and the securities markets.

One possible source of encouragement was a continued brightening in the auto sales picture, with Detroit recording its best sales performance in 16 months during October.

Among auto stocks, General Motors added 1/4 to 54 1/4; Ford gained 1/4 to 40 1/4; Chrysler rose 1/4 to 10 1/4, and American Motors was up 1/4 at 5 1/4.

Prominent gainers in the glamor sector included IBM, up 1/4 at 213 1/4; Philip Morris, 1 1/2 higher at 50 1/4; Upjohn, ahead 1 1/2 at 42 1/4, and Fairchild Camera, up 1 1/4 at 47 1/4.

Mapco eased 1/4 to 33 1/4, and Falcon Seaboard tumbled 2 1/4 to 29 1/4 on the American Stock Exchange.

The two companies said the Federal Trade Commission was investigating their proposed merger.

United Technologies, the day's most active issue, slipped 1/4 to 49 in turnover of 109,000 shares.

The Amex market value index was off .06 at 82.59.

In the over-the-counter market, the NASDAQ composite index closed at 78.86, up .24.

The Nebraska Rural Electric Association said Tuesday representatives of rural electric systems in Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado and Wyoming have gone on record in support of coal slurry pipeline legislation.

Rate Hikes Proposed At MUD

Omaha (AP) — Metropolitan Utilities District directors will be asked Wednesday to approve an increase in water rates that would boost the average residential customer's bill by $11 a year.

MUD managers presented the proposal to directors last week.

Rate Hikes Proposed At MUD

The increase would average 19.5% overall. Also proposed was a different method of billing customers, the plan calling for the cost of water to double if summer usage exceeded twice the amount used during the winter months of December to March.

Boosts Futures

Chicago (AP) — A surge of new buying produced short covering and the combination drove farm commodity futures prices higher on the Chicago Board of Trade Tuesday.

Soybeans gained 6 cents and wheat futures almost as much. Oats were up about 5 while corn futures were mixed. Soybean oil advanced nearly 1/2 cent a pound but soybean meal futures were mixed.

Iced broilers gained more than 1 cent a pound on demand that reflected strength in red meat futures.

Gold futures on the Chicago market posted their best gain in several sessions, advancing $2.50 an ounce. The New York market was closed because of elections but the spot gold market abroad was firmer.

Domestic silver futures gained more than 10 cents an ounce, and this lent some drive to gold futures.

Judge Urbom Upholds Poindexter Conviction

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

Edward Poindexter has failed in his federal court challenge of his first degree murder conviction in the 1970 suitcase bomb slaying of an Omaha policeman.

U.S. District Judge Warren K. Urbom said Tuesday that none of Poindexter's constitutional rights were violated and refused to order that he be released or retried.

More than a year ago Urbom had ordered that David Rice, who with Poindexter was convicted of first degree murder in the case, be released or retried because illegally obtained evidence was used against him.

The ruling was upheld by the Eighth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. It is now pending before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Case Closely Watched

Legal observers are watching the case to learn if further inroads will be made against the so-called exclusionary rule, in which otherwise reliable evidence is suppressed because it was illegally obtained.

The evidence in the case is dynamite police found in Rice's home when they went to the home to arrest Duane Peak, who later testified against Rice and Poindexter. After this discovery police found dynamite particles in Rice's clothing when he turned himself in to police.

Urbom ruled that police had no probable cause to believe that Peak was in Rice's home, which was the justification they used to search it.

Poindexter's attorneys had argued that the ruling that Rice's right of privacy was violated by a search of his home should be extended to Poindexter.

In a hearing before Urbom in May, Poindexter's attorneys argued that Poindexter often stayed at the Rice home and kept belongings there.

No Right To Privacy

Urbom, however, ruled that these facts did not give Poindexter a right of privacy in Rice's home, noting that Poindexter did not have a key and "almost always sought out Rice for permission to enter the premises."

A defense claim that the Poindexter's arrest was illegal was also rejected by Urbom, although Urbom said an Omaha judge issued an arrest warrant for Poindexter without possessing enough facts to make it valid.

Poindexter's arrest was valid, Urbom said, because even without a warrant police had enough information to "tip" the scales "beyond suspicion to the point of probability of guilt" that Poindexter conspired to kill a police officer.

Suitcase Of Dynamite

Urbom said police knew through Donald Peak that his brother, Duane, had been carrying a suitcase filled with dynamite the night the policeman was killed.

Donald Peak also told police, Urbom said, that he thought Poindexter, chief officer of the National Committee to Combat Fascism, was the only member of that group who knew how to make a bomb.

Urbom also turned down defense arguments that the testimony of Duane Peak, cited by Urbom as the most damaging evidence against Poindexter, was coerced.

Urbom said that there was no doubt that Peak was afraid he might be sentenced to death for his role in the killing and that prosecutors made a bargain in which he agreed to testify against Rice and Poindexter in return for a lesser charge.

But this and the fact that Omaha police supplied Peak with a comfortable environment and palatable cuisine, did not make his testimony inadmissible, Urbom wrote.

Helped Rig Bomb

Peak testified during the trial that he helped Rice and Poindexter rig a suitcase with three sticks of dynamite and wire to blasting caps and a battery.

Peak said he took the suitcase to an abandoned house and called police to the address with a phone call that he had seen a woman being dragged screaming into the home.

Larry Minard was killed and several other officers were wounded when the suitcase was moved.

Three Women In Lincoln Cited For Achievements

Three young Lincoln women were honored Tuesday night by the Lincoln chapters of Business and Professional Women for their professional achievements in businesses and careers.

Those receiving recognition at the annual banquet were Beth Birnstihl of 3110 Alden Ave.; Jill Hunt, of 741 S. 32nd; and Barbara Havlicek of 144 S. 38th.

Mrs. Birnstihl is currently on the faculty at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, and serves as a district extension supervisor in home economics for the Nebraska Cooperative Extension Service.

Mrs. Hunt is on the nursing staff at Veteran's Hospital in Lincoln and is also a volunteer probation counselor.

Mrs. Havlicek is a home economics teacher at Lincoln Southeast High School, and corresponding secretary for the Nebraska Home Economics Association.

Money Accounted For In Drug Buy

Lincoln Police Chief George Hansen Tuesday said all money involved in the purchase of alleged narcotics in the Sherrell Lewis case has been accounted for.

The statement came in reply to a letter from State Sen. Ernest Chambers that $40 of the $63 Lincoln police officers withdrew from the department's "Informant and Narcotics Buy Fund" was unaccounted for.

Hansen said that $23 was used to purchase what was thought to be cocaine, later determined to be lidocaine, which is not illegal, $20 was paid to the informant and $20 was returned to the fund.

Hansen said "properly executed receipt forms" were obtained from the informant in the transaction. He said a running ledger is kept of the confidential fund and said it is audited by city officials and is open to federal officials.

British Money Reserves Fall

LONDON (AP) — Britain's monetary reserves fell $146 million in October to $5.713 billion at month's end, the Treasury said today.

The reserves would have fallen more but for an inflow during October of $7 million borrowed in foreign currency by British state enterprises.

Britain's official reserves consist of holdings of gold, special drawing rights, convertible currencies and the country's automatic drawing right on the International Monetary Fund.

Common Delays Decision On Trash Burning Studies

Under the second alternative, the city would provide steam heat for downtown, the University of Nebraska's city campus and possibly the State Capitol.

Consultant Bob Mitchell has reported such a system would cost $26 million, plus another $8.6 million to install steam distribution lines.

Councilman Bob Sikyta asserted there are "some big gaps" which have to be satisfactorily answered before he'll buy any garbage burning plans.

Sikyta wanted some assurances that NPPD would go along with the plans, noting that work now is being completed to convert the Sheldon station to a 100% coal burning plant.

And, Sikyta argued, the city doesn't know it even can find buyers for the energy produced.

"This is an expensive way to get rid of solid waste," he said.

Councilman Max Denney also questioned whether "the city can afford this."

If local officials decide to build some type of solid waste burning plant, the project would be financed with general obligation bonds. Voter approval is needed on the issue of such bonds.

Verne Traudt, a member of the Southeast Chapter of Professional Engineers, which has proposed the burning of garbage as fuel, suggested the city should study yet another alternative. Traudt said the officials should consider building a chilled water plant, using the Lincoln Electric System's K St. power plant, at 8th and J.

The Downtown Advisory Committee also is urging the city to consider providing steam heat in the central business district.

The Common asked Larry Jorgenson, director of the Lincoln Center Development Association, to poll downtown businessmen to see how many are interested in buying steam from the city. A number of businesses already have switched to another form of energy from steam, since LES plans to discontinue steam heat in May 1977.

Councilwoman Sue Bailey said that one of the decisions the lawmakers face is the setting of priorities in determining who gets the energy produced at such a plant.

"We have a limited amount of solid waste," Mrs. Bailey said. "All of a sudden it's become a precious commodity."

Striker Named Top Teacher

Tallahassee, Fla. (UPI) — Mrs. Carol Mears, who joined other Broward County teachers on the picket line during an illegal strike last month, has been named Florida teacher of the year and acclaimed for her "dedication to and enthusiasm for" her profession.

Aides to Education Commissioner Ralph Turlington, who chose her from a list of nominees from all over Florida, said Mrs. Mears' participation in the strike did not come up in the selection process.

Fellow teachers say that Mrs. Mears is so good that her 1st grade students are easily identifiable long after they have left her classroom.
